THREE CENTS

10,000 Slips Seized in Car Just Trifle in D.C. Numbers

Racket Flourishes
Chiefs Out of District
Children Carry Bets
Profits Increased

(This is the first of a series of articles resurveying the numbers racket in Washington, six months after passage of the new law.)

By Edward T. Follard

A "pick-up" man, employed by one of Washington's leading numbers racketeers, eluded police after a spectacular chase yesterday, but he left behind him evidence that this city, despite the new anti-lottery law, is still playing the numbers as much or more than ever before.

The fugitive abandoned his automobile, and in this Sgt. George Deyoe and Policeman William McEwen reported that they found 10,000 numbers slips, representing bets made in the forenoon.

The bets ranged from 25 cents to $5.00.

In passing S. 711, Washington's current gambling statute, Congress took an old law and put "teeth" into it, hoping that these legal fangs would tear into the fat and flourishing numbers racket.

Still a Fat Investment

That was late in March. President Roosevelt signed the bill on April 6.

Today, some six and a half months later, the numbers racket in Washington is still a fat investment for the underworld bankers who operate it. They are more wary than they were—all the big ones have moved their headquarters into near-by Maryland and Virginia—and their agents, the numbers "writers" and "pick-up" men, also are more wary, but the racket continues to flourish.

The chances of winning and, more especially, of collecting, are not much greater than the chances of finding a ten-spot on Pennsylvania avenue. Nevertheless, thousands of Washingtonians—maybe as many as 100,000—insist on taking a chance, day after day.

10,000 Slips on One Man

How many are playing their hunches and parting with their money is indicated by the haul made yesterday by Sgt. Deyoe and Officer McEwen. The man they were after is merely one of many who cover a certain territory daily, collecting bets from the bootblacks, the elevator boys and others who serve as "writers." And yet this one man, according to police, was carrying 10,000 betting slips, one day's play.

The policemen, who had been trailing him, closed in on him at North Capitol and R streets. He jumped into his automobile and fled, and the chase led through the Northeast section. Apparently he was headed for Prince Georges County, Md., where his boss maintains a headquarters. However, near the market at Fifth street and Florida avenue, the pursuit became too hot, and he abandoned his automobile and disappeared.

The betting slips were in a large bag with a zipper.

Bets Increased

These slips bore out reports that the numbers operators, now facing greater hazards, have persuaded their clients to make larger bets—to get away from the penny and nickel bets that long marked the racket.

Supreme Justice Went to Paris Last Summer
Maid Tells of Secret Safe in Apartment

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 27—Gregory W. O'Keefe, assistant collector of the port, said today customs agents had raided the Park avenue apartment of State Supreme Justice Edgar J. Lauer in search of gowns, hats, jeweled slippers, alpacas and other goods allegedly smuggled into the United States on the French liner Normandie and Ile de France.

The Supreme Court is the second highest court of New York State.

The agents, moving rapidly and without comment, left the apartment later carrying four large valises.

The application for the search warrant was filed by Assistant United States Attorney Joseph L. Delaney, who declined to discuss the case. The application was based on an affidavit by Gordon H. Pike, customs agent.

Pike's affidavit said that on June 24, 1938, John and Mary Doe left this port for Paris and that on September 12, 1938, they returned on the Normandie.

7 in Family Face Starvation In Law's Delay

Mother Beseeches Court
Son Killed in Fall
Sued for Damages

Trapped in the law's delays, Mrs. Cindrella Davis, 40, beseeched the District Court yesterday to speed up the trial which threatens her and six children with starvation.

Her damage suit for the death of her son, Frederick, on his eighteenth birthday, December 23, 1933, is docketed for trial sometime next October. When it is settled, Attorney Irvin Bolotin explained, she will be entitled to as much as $7,500 under the workmen's compensation act.

Meanwhile, Bolotin said in support of his motion to advance the case, Mrs. Davis has been cut off the relief rolls, can't find a job and faces eviction from her home at 2132 1/2 H street northwest.

The son was a messenger boy when he fell down an elevator shaft in a building at Tenth and H streets northwest. He was the only support of the family and his mother sued for damages. It developed the law prevented her collecting the compensation payments until the damage suit was finally settled.

Mrs. Davis was awarded $6,000 in the first trial, but the District Court of Appeals, on January 3, 1938, set aside this award because the jury was told it might consider the statutory liability of the owners of the building. They could only be held under the common law rules, the court held, and sent the case back to be tried over.

D.A.R. Rejects Half of Desk, Faces 'Revolt' in Tennessee

An open rift between Tennessee Daughters of the American Revolution and their national organization is in the offing, it appeared yesterday, because the parent body never thinks the furniture Tennessee ships up to furnish its room in Continental Memorial Hall is authentically colonial and so ships it right back.

After more than four years of effort, Tennessee has been able to make only one-half of a desk "stick." Her room is the sore spot in the entire hall, where 28 of the States have gorgeous displays of valuable and historic pieces.

A clock that once kept time for Andrew Jackson is one of the Tennessee pieces that went back. But it is the half of a desk that brought the quarrel to its present boiling stage.

That desk—all of it, the Tennessee Daughters claim—once belonged to John Sevier, a Revolutionary soldier who fought at King's Mountain and then became Tennessee's first Governor. The national body—supposedly on the advice of furniture experts from the Smithsonian—took the stand that the top bookcase part of the desk was too modern for Sevier to have known personally. Back it went, but the bottom part "measured up" and was in use yesterday in the office of Mrs. Willard Steele, the curator general.

That's another thing the Tennessee Daughters don't like—this using of their room as an office. When Constitution Hall was built, they claim, all offices were supposed to be moved there and the Continental Memorial Hall rooms left for the States for furnishing purposes.

TEXT OF NOTE to Japan. Page 5.

The Protest to Tokyo

The United States Government yesterday made public three blunt demands on Japan for preservation of an open door in China for American trade, discontinuance of Japanese trade monopolies in occupied territory and noninterference with American rights.

The tersely worded note delivered on October 6 by Ambassador Joseph G. Grew has been followed by a three weeks' silence from Tokyo. Although an early reply was requested, the Japanese foreign office said no date has been set for an answer. Nor has the note been published in Japan.

The United States might retaliate economically in event of an unfavorable reply, through restrictions on Japanese trade in this country and withholding tariff concessions from the Oriental empire.

Neutrality Stressed

Japan was reminded significantly that despite interference with American trade rights in China, "the Government of the United States has not sought, either in its own territory or in the territory of third countries, to establish or influence the establishment of embargoes, import prohibitions, exchange controls, preferential restrictions, monopolies or special companies designed to eliminate or having the effect of eliminating Japanese trade and enterprise."

Japanese interests were charged with having resorted to virtually all of these methods in their treatment of American business in China.

Strict adherence of the United States to the Japanese-American commercial treaty of 1911 was further pointed out, whereby "Japanese commerce and enterprise have continued to enjoy in the United States equality of opportunity."

The 3,000-word note struck a new tone of firmness. Japanese changes

Lorton Fugitive, 'Good Citizen Now,' To Seek Pardon

Marionette, Wis., Oct. 27 (U.P.)—Dewey L. Roush, "model citizen" of Amberg Township for 10 years, said in his county jail cell today he would ask a Presidential pardon for the 1925 automobile theft for which he faces return to the Lorton, Va., Reformatory.

Roush said he walked away from the honor prison farm camp at Lorton in 1928 after serving six months of a 3-year term. County officers arrested him Tuesday.

"I have gone straight since I escaped," he said. "I have operated a 40-acre farm and supported my mother and my wife."

Neighbors are circulating a petition for his release.

Mexico Contracts To Sell Italy Huge Oil Supply

Mexico City, Oct. 27 (U.P.)—The Mexican government tonight announced it had contracted to sell "several million dollars' worth" of oil to an Italian firm.

In addition, the government asserted representatives had been named to push oil sales in the United States and Brazil.

Mexico's government oil supplies were greatly augmented last March by expropriation of the foreign-owned oil industry, valued by its owners at $400,000,000.

Legality of that expropriation is still being contested in Mexican courts by United States and British concerns involved.

Roosevelt Visits Yard, Boards Yacht

Directed by smiling marines and sailors, 215,990 people converged yesterday on the Navy Yard to witness a nine-hour Navy Day program.

With planes zooming overhead, President Roosevelt, accompanied by George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, arrived at the main gate shortly after noon, where he was met by Rear Admiral George T. Pettigill, commandant of the yard.

The Chief Executive was accorded full naval honors, including a 21-gun salute, and then drove between crowded curbs to the waterfront, where he boarded the yacht Potomac with his party for a cruise down the river.

At the docks long lines of people waited to board the new destroyer Shaw and the Coast Guard cutter Bibb, brought here specially for Navy Day.

In preparation for the crowds every movable object aboard the two ships was battened down, officials said. Despite their thoroughness, some objects were taken home by over-enthusiastic souvenir-hunters. Aboard the Bibb a bell-rope mysteriously disappeared even though extra precautions were taken to insure its safety.

Meanwhile, in the park beside the quay an impromptu party was in progress. To the tunes of "Flat Foot Floogie" and "A Tisket, A Tasket," broadcast over loudspeakers, dancers writhed in the latest swing steps. Shouts of "Yeah, man" were frequent.

Thousands of Children

Thousands of children scrambled up the sides of ships and into boats and other small watercraft. They played tag around the guns the Navy has taken as trophies. Twenty children reported lost later turned up safely.

Stands run by the Navy Relief Society sold hot dogs as fast as they could be put on display.

Early in the afternoon King Neptune and his gaudily painted court of mermaids arrived at the waterfront where they received the key to the Navy Yard from Capt. Ferdinand L. Reichmuth, chairman of the Navy Day committee.

Demonstrations Given

Sailors, marines and coast guardsmen paraded frequently to music of the Navy Band. Demonstrations were given by Navy planes of dive bombing and a small boat crew of the Coast Guard went through the drill for righting a capsized dory. Marines from Quantico were on duty.

George VI Inherits Pictures of Queen

London, Oct. 27 (U.P.)—Queen Elizabeth was bequeathed the diamonds of her mother, the Countess of Strathmore, in a will made public today.

Among other things, the countess left to her youngest daughter, the Queen, "my diamond snake bracelet and my yellow diamond cross."

King George received two miniatures of his wife. The bulk of the $55,000 estate of the countess, who died last June 23, was left to two younger sons.

Gaithersburg Boy Killed by Auto

Remus Hungerford, 16, of Gaithersburg, Md., left his home last night to buy ice cream for his brother's birthday party and died under the wheels of a car.

The boy was dead on arrival at Georgetown Hospital. Death resulted from a fractured skull.

He was struck down, his mother told police when he went to buy the ice cream for his oldest brother, whose birthday was being celebrated by Remus and her five other children.

Dies Committee Members Fail To Halt Inquiry

Democrats Defeated
'Unfair,' Was Protest
Election Respite Sought

By Sidney Olson.

Two Republicans, a "lame duck" Democrat and Chairman Dies of the House committee investigating un-American activities yesterday voted down a proposal by two Democrats that the committee postpone further inquiries until after the November 8 election.

Representatives Healey, of Massachusetts, and Dempsey, of New Mexico, both Democrats, had appealed to the tall Texan to halt the sessions. (Healey was a major figure in the New England bloc that fought to pass the wage-hour bill last session. Dies headed the opposition of the conservative Southern Democrats from his post on the Rules Committee.)

Dies was joined in the vote by Representatives Thomas, of New Jersey, and Mason, of Illinois, both Republicans, and by Representative Mosier, of Ohio, who was defeated for nomination in that State's Democratic primary on August 9.

Deplores 'Attack' on Murphy

Healey and Dempsey pleaded with Dies, saying it was "obviously unfair" to them to continue the sessions when they were prevented by hard-fought campaigns from being in the State.

Inquiry Started Over $50,000 Quantic Fire

A special board last night started investigating a fire which destroyed two old wooden buildings at the Quantic, Va., Marine Base early in the morning.

In two hours, wind-swept flames made ashes of the post exchange, the motion picture hall and gymnasium, and the laundry. All contents of the buildings also were destroyed. Damage was tentatively set at $50,000.

Two privates narrowly escaped death as the post fire department and several hundred Marines subdued the blaze within two hours.

Witness Says Nazis Asked Her to Open D. C. Spy Salon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 27—Miss Katherine Moog, German-born former nurse, testified today in Federal Court that Lieut. Comdr. Udo von Bonin and Hermann Menzel, members of the high command of the German armed forces, asked her to rent a house in Washington for the purpose of making social contacts to aid in spreading the doctrines of national socialism.

Miss Moog, who is also known as Mrs. Katherine Moog Busch, but has been divorced and uses her maiden name, testified in the trial of Johanna Hofmann, Erich Glaser and Otto Hermann Voss on charges of espionage. Von Bonin and Menzel, who are attached to the defense office of the German war ministry, counterespionage division, are among the 14 fugitive defendants named in the espionage indictment.

Other developments today included identification of documents found on William Lonkowski at the time of his arrest in 1935 as photographs and detailed descriptions of plans of United States Navy airplanes, and a description of Lonkowski's flight to Canada after his arrest in the automobile of Dr. Ignatz T. Griebel, former Yorkville physician. Lonkowski and Dr. Griebel are both fugitive defendants.

Miss Moog, a tall, attractive brunette, said she sailed from New York on the North German Lloyd liner Europa in June, 1937, and by coincidence found her friend, Dr. Griebel, on board. She said Dr. Griebel was a doctor of medicine.

U. S. Income Rises Again As Jobless Roll Is Cut

4th Monthly Boost
Still Below 1937
10,539,000 Idle
Factories Better Off

The national income increased in September for the fourth consecutive month.

Unemployment dropped by 548,000—from an estimated 11,087,000 in August to 10,539,000.

Approximately 440,000 persons were re-employed in nonagricultural occupations between August and September, in addition to nearly 200,000 who had returned to work between June and August.

These new reflections of the accelerating business revival came yesterday from the Commerce Department, the American Federation of Labor and the Department of Labor, respectively.

Incomes Rising

Secretary of Commerce Roper reported income payments to individuals rose to 83.3 per cent of the 1929 level. It was 82.5 per cent in August. The September index was 2.9 points above the low point for the year, but 8 per cent below the 1937 peak.

The national income for the first nine months of this year was placed at $47,300,000,000 or 7.4 per cent less than for the corresponding portion of 1937.

Since the income was falling in the final months of 1937, however, and payments are expected to increase through the balance of 1938, Roper predicted the figure for all of 1938 would be closer to the 1937 total than the nine-month total would indicate. Since the cost of living has been lower this year, he added, purchasing power has been relatively higher than the income total.

Interest Stationary

Comparing the nine-month period this year with that of last year, Roper said compensation of employees was 9 per cent lower, interest payments were practically unchanged, dividend payments decreased about 20 per cent, entrepreneurial withdrawals (sums taken out of their own businesses by farmers, professional men and the like) decreased about 5 per cent, and relief and social security payments increased.

Secretary Perkins' Employment Report Said:

"For the entire period from June to September over 640,000 men and women were re-employed. This figure does not take account of casual workers and others employed in harvesting crops, including approximately 120,000 cannery workers who are not part of the normal labor supply."

Employment of manufacturing wage earners increased by 250,000, an increase of 3.7 per cent, which is much greater than the usual seasonal gain of slightly over 1 per cent. Factory pay rolls also increased by 5 per cent, $7,500,000, although there has ordinarily been a gain of about 1 per cent between August and September.

Seventy-three of the 87 manufacturing industries reported employment gains between August and September, and 69 reported larger pay rolls.

Employment Gains

Employment in the durable goods group rose 5 per cent. Thirty-seven of the 43 industries surveyed reported employment gains. Activity in automobile plants preparatory to the introduction of new models, was reflected in a rise of 33 per cent in employment. In iron and steel manufacturing employment showed a further gain of 1 per cent, and pay rolls increased 4 per cent.

Employment in the industries manufacturing nondurable goods increased by 2.8 per cent. The usual large seasonal employment gains were reported in the canning, cottonseed oil and beet sugar industries.

2 Resort Men Held in Killing Of Ga. Rector

Accused as Instigators
Colored Pair Hired
Pastor Fought Vice

By the Associated Press.
Brunswick, Ga., Oct. 27.—Two St. Simons Island resort operators were charged today with hiring two colored men to kill Dr. Charles H. Lee eight months ago so the vice-hating rector of historic Christ Church there no longer could oppose illicit gambling. The island is about 12 miles from here.

Police Chief J. E. Register, who announced arrest of the four on murder warrants, said one of the colored men, George Clayborn, made an oral confession implicating the resort operators, Henry J. Coker and W. H. Gofor, middle-aged brothers, and naming the other colored man, known to him only as "Willie" or "Looney" as the actual slayer.

Shot Preparing Sermon

Dr. Lee, Episcopal clergyman, rugged and erect in spite of his 71 years, was killed near midnight February 5 by a mysterious shot from the dark as he sat in the rectory preparing a sermon.

Register quoted Clayborn as reporting he fired one shot from outside the rectory window and missed. The rector moved about and then returned to his place. Clayborn told officers "Willie" then said, "give me that gun" and fired the shot that killed Dr. Lee.

The police chief said Clayborn related Henry Coker gave him $150 and the pistol to kill the clergyman and that W. H. Coker hired "Willie" to help. He said he did not know what "Willie" was paid. The pistol, Clayborn said, was returned to Henry Coker.

Attorneys for the Cokers said the brothers denied all connection with the case. The four accused were separated and held incommunicado.

Tip Wins Girl Parole

Register credited Chief Ben T. Watkins, of the Macon, Ga., police, and two of the latter's staff with co-operation in rounding up the case. In Macon, Watkins said a young woman convict, whose name was withheld, provided "the foot-hold we needed in breaking" the case. Watkins said she told of observing an innocent spectator one of the Coker brothers pay a colored man $150 the night Dr. Lee was killed.

A casual remark to relatives by the young woman, who was seeking parole, Watkins added, led officers to talk with her about the case. She was paroled October 12.

Register disclosed Clayborn had been under arrest a week for questioning before his statement. The other colored man was arrested at Washington, Ga. Sheriff George W. Owens and two city officers arrested the Cokers this morning. Henry J. Coker is owner of the Golden Isle Hotel, and his brother is proprietor of the Brass Rail, a liquor store.

Victim Virginia Trained

Dr. Lee was a native of West Virginia, the son of a well-known family and a second cousin of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Educated at Hampden Sydney College and Virginia Theological Seminary, he entered the ministry in 1893. He was rector of St. Paul's in Macon, Ga., for 15 years before coming to St. Simon's in 1930.

Christ Church is one of the oldest Episcopal parishes in America, having been established shortly after Gen. Oglethorpe founded the colony of Georgia. Among its first rectors were John Wesley and Charles Wesley, who later founded the Methodist faith.

Dayton to Close All Schools Today for Lack of Funds

34,000 Pupils Will Get Indefinite 'Vacation'
Crisis Brought on by Continued Borrowing
Legislature May Be Called to Meet Problem

By the Associated Press.
Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 27.—Dayton's public school treasury was bare tonight and the city's 34,000 pupils and 1,300 school employees faced an indefinite vacation, starting tomorrow night.

Emerson Landis, superintendent, expressed hope the seven high schools, five junior high schools, 44 elementary schools and 17 kindergartens might reopen December 3. This, however, was contingent upon receipt of the city's usual quarterly share of $240,000 in State money. Even this money would permit operation only until January 1, Landis said.

"For nearly seven years we have operated a limited program," the school board announced. "It became necessary to borrow and encumber the future. We are no longer able to do this."

For several years the board has been borrowing each year to make up the previous year's deficits.

Pricked in Ear, Beauty Client Asks $20,000

She wanted hairpins in her permanent and not through her ear drums, Mrs. Gertrude M. Kennedy, 25, of 3908 Twenty-fifth place northeast, told District Court yesterday in her complaint for $20,000 damages from the Cosmopolitan Beauty Salon, 527 Tenth street northwest.

It was on September 27, said the complaint drafted by Attorney William W. Stickney, that Mrs. Kennedy dropped in for a wave and the defendants, in the person of one of their operators, "willfully or recklessly or negligently" stuck a pin in her left ear. Since then she has suffered vertigo, impaired hearing and her health is permanently injured, she added.

The defendants named were Morris Bennett, Mrs. Jessie M. Bennett, Morris Bennett, Inc., and the salon which they run. Mrs. Bennett said the action: "Mrs. Kennedy was very nervous that day. She didn't keep still and she turned so quickly that the pin stuck her ear. It was really her fault."

Frank J. Kennedy, husband of the plaintiff, sued also, for $10,000.

Death Stills Alma Gluck's Voice at 54

Had Vast Public
Star of Phonograph Disc
Retired to Be Wife

By the Associated Press.
New York, Oct. 27.—Alma Gluck, opera favorite of yesterday who retired at the height of a brilliant career to devote herself to her husband and children, died today after a long illness. She was 54.

She was the wife of Erem Zimbalist, the shy violinist whose tap on her arm on a Jersey-bound ferry one night started a friendship that resulted in their marriage several years later. They had two children, Maria Virginia (Mrs. Ogden Goetz) and Erem, Jr.

Recordings Made Millions

Millions who have never seen the interior of an opera house knew and loved Alma Gluck's voice, which reached homes throughout the world on phonograph records. A million reproductions were made of her recording of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Royalties from records amounted to more than she received from concerts and opera engagements. She testified in a court action in 1927 that she received $600,000 in royalties from the Victor Talking Machine Co., from 1914 to 1919 and $345,000 from other engagements.

She was born on May 11, 1884. She was brought to New York at the age of 6. She attended public schools, the normal college here and Union College in Schenectady. Although she knew she had a fine voice, she had no aspirations for an operatic career and entered business as a stenographer.

A summer vacation in the Adirondacks brought a chance meeting with a musician who urged her to train her voice, and after studying for three years with Buzi-Pecchia she sang for Arturo Toscanini and Gatti-Casazza.

Began Career Skeptically

A five-year contract with the Metropolitan Opera resulted, a contract which she accepted with skepticism. She made her debut as Sophie in Massenet's "Werther" in 1909 and from that time her rise to fame was rapid. In her career at the Metropolitan she sang 20 roles.

Her death came on the twenty-seventh anniversary of her husband's American debut, when he played Glazunov's A minor concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra to an enthusiastic audience October 27, 1911.

She had one daughter, Marcia (Mrs. Russell Davenport) by a previous marriage.

Dietitian Accused Of Cashing Check On False Pretense

Mrs. Helen Gertrude Randall, identified by police as the veteran dictator of diets for the famous of two continents, was charged last night at police headquarters with false pretenses, in connection with the cashing of a pair of checks for $68.50.

The 41-year-old dietitian, credited in Southern California with lecturing to a million persons a year about what they should eat, was brought to Washington by police from Henderson, S. C., after she was arrested on complaint of Lloyd Reed, 1831 California street northwest.

Reed claimed he gave the woman a check for $68.50 for money he owed her in Washington last year. She later objected, he alleged, that the check could not be cashed because it did not name the bank. He gave her a second check, and she later cashed both of them, he charged.

The independent group contended that Commissioners Riley Elgen, David McCoach, Jr., and Richmond D. Keech had no power to limit the size of taxicab fleets, that only Congress could do so. The order, issued June 30, took their property against the Constitution without due process of law, the taxi men said.

They added that no public convenience or necessity was involved, that the order would by no means lessen the traffic problem and therefore was "unreasonable and oppressive."

An illustrated talk by Maj. Ernest W. The films depicted activities at Camp Maj. Ernest W. Brown, the Police Boys Club summer retreat at Scotland, Md.

Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, rector of the host church, introduced the speaker, Richard E. Shands, vice president of the league, presided in the absence of the president, Lieut. John E. Scott, of the Metropolitan Police Department, and leader of the Boys Club activities, was a guest. The dinner was served by the afternoon circle of the Women's Auxiliary of Epiphany. The boys, 16 in number, represented Clubs No. 5 and 2.

Alma Gluck, opera favorite of yesterday who retired at the height of a brilliant career to devote herself to her husband and children, died today after a long illness. She was 54.

She was the wife of Erem Zimbalist, the shy violinist whose tap on her arm on a Jersey-bound ferry one night started a friendship that resulted in their marriage several years later. They had two children, Maria Virginia (Mrs. Ogden Goetz) and Erem, Jr.

Millions who have never seen the interior of an opera house knew and loved Alma Gluck's voice, which reached homes throughout the world on phonograph records. A million reproductions were made of her recording of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Royalties from records amounted to more than she received from concerts and opera engagements. She testified in a court action in 1927 that she received $600,000 in royalties from the Victor Talking Machine Co., from 1914 to 1919 and $345,000 from other engagements.

She was born on May 11, 1884. She was brought to New York at the age of 6. She attended public schools, the normal college here and Union College in Schenectady. Although she knew she had a fine voice, she had no aspirations for an operatic career and entered business as a stenographer.

A summer vacation in the Adirondacks brought a chance meeting with a musician who urged her to train her voice, and after studying for three years with Buzi-Pecchia she sang for Arturo Toscanini and Gatti-Casazza.

Began Career Skeptically

A five-year contract with the Metropolitan Opera resulted, a contract which she accepted with skepticism. She made her debut as Sophie in Massenet's "Werther" in 1909 and from that time her rise to fame was rapid. In her career at the Metropolitan she sang 20 roles.

Her death came on the twenty-seventh anniversary of her husband's American debut, when he played Glazunov's A minor concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra to an enthusiastic audience October 27, 1911.

She had one daughter, Marcia (Mrs. Russell Davenport) by a previous marriage.

Roosevelt Talk Cheers British Opposition

Slap at Munich Hailed Affects Election Issue Germans Pity Indians

By the Associated Press.
London, Oct. 27.—President Roosevelt's speech against "peace by fear" appeared today to offer new ammunition at a strategic time for critics of the policy of peace through concessions to dictators.

These critics saw the President's broadcast last night as an implied slap at the peace of Munich, which became the direct issue in a Parliamentary by-election at Oxford today.

The election was the first since the Czechoslovak crisis brought Europe to the brink of war.

Officials made no comment but political quarters attached significance insofar as the Munich accord was concerned to Mr. Roosevelt's assertion "peace by fear has no higher or more enduring quality than peace by the sword."

References Embarrassing
The President's references to Jewish problems were at a particularly embarrassing time for Britain. Faced by the danger that the Arab revolt against Jewish immigration in Palestine may spread elsewhere in the Far East, the government has begun to curtail the influx to Palestine.

It was expected here the ban would be intensified until order is restored in the Holy Land.

The indications of increased rearmament plans found favor since the British apparently keep a fond hope of American aid in the event of European war.

Berlin, Oct. 27 (AP).—The controlled German press today sharply criticized President Roosevelt's address warning against "peace by fear" and his mention of "disposition all over the world of millions of helpless and persecuted wanderers."

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt advised him to "remember the Indians when robbing about the Jews."

The Berlin Lokalanzeiger said his mention of foreign armaments and his purposes was merely an apology for America's own armament program.

D. N. B. (Official German news agency) captioned its brief account of the President's broadcast last night: "Election Speech of Roosevelt at the Expense of Other Countries."

Hoover Praised
Both the news agency and the Lokalanzeiger contrasted his address with that of former President Hoover, especially emphasizing Mr. Hoover's description of the four-power Munich accord as a contribution to peace.

A streamer headline on Lokalanzeiger's front page read: "Former President Hoover Versus Roosevelt" and said "Hoover, in contrast to Roosevelt, was able to base his arguments upon observation personally made in Europe recently... He drew the honest deduction that in his opinion no general war could be expected."

The Fremdenblatt lectured the President on his duties, saying: "In this country one regards the duty of the Chief Executive to be that of opposing every incitation calculated to cut the ground from under attempts at peaceful understanding."

Rome Not Surprised

Rome, Oct. 27 (AP).—The Fascist newspaper La Tribuna today said President Roosevelt's speech of last night "fits quite well into the picture of contemporary democratic, Jewish and Masonic activity."

The newspaper said the speech showed that Jews constituted the "real reason rather than the pretext which impels democratic governments to arm themselves to the point of congestion."

"The oratorical demonstration of the American President does not surprise us," La Tribuna said. "It contributes, however, to a better definition of the positions and tendencies in this grave moment of world history and consequently to better clarification of the action of all those men and nations who are fighting for the triumph of justice."

La Tribuna was the only paper which dealt editorially with the President's speech.

Persons in high Fascist quarters said little notice had been taken of the President's broadcast last night since they were concerned with "more important problems."

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—George Fleming, 38, chauffeur, who disappeared with jewels worth $119,000, the property of his employer, was held for the grand jury in bail of $25,000 on a charge of grand larceny after a hearing today. He had been arrested early today.

Fleming's employer, Edward N. Townsend, Jr., said he felt sorry for Fleming and believed the entire episode "a mistake." Fleming, he said, was a "thoroughly trustworthy person."

Chamberlain Names Stanhope, 67, First Lord of Admiralty

De la Warr Replaces Him 2 Cabinet Posts Open Conservative Elected

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Oct. 27.—Prime Minister Chamberlain shook his cabinet today, but postponed the introduction of the new, young blood, which some of his critics say is needed to expedite Britain's lagging armament expansion.

A member of Chamberlain's conservative party also won today the first parliamentary by-election since the four-power Munich accord marked a dramatic high spot of the government's foreign policy, the Associated Press said.

But the winner, Quintin Hogg, with 15,797 votes, pooled a majority only half as large as the conservatives piled up in the Oxford district in the 1935 election. His opponent, A. D. Lindsay, received 12,363 votes. (Voting was heavier than in the previous election, indicating interest aroused by the campaign based principally on Chamberlain's foreign policy.—Editor's note.)

Stanhope to Admiralty
Most important of today's changes was the promotion of the 57-year-old Earl Stanhope, who has been president of the board of education to be first lord of the admiralty, as successor to the younger Alfred Duff Cooper, who resigned October 1 because he distrusted the government's foreign policy and could not swallow the Munich peace terms.

A second cabinet change was the transfer of Earl de la Warr, who has been lord privy seal, to the presidency of the board of education to replace Earl Stanhope.

No appointment was announced to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the dominions secretary, Lord Stanley, October 16. Apparently the colonial secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, will continue to serve also as dominions secretary with many problems to solve, including the Palestine and Ireland partition issues.

To Sound Parliament
The post of lord privy seal is also left open by the transfer of Earl de la Warr.

The British cabinet will have to struggle along for a few days with only 20 members compared to the usual 22. The prime minister has postponed further changes to appraise the temper of Parliament when it reconvenes next Tuesday to debate the Munich peace and to hear the government's explanation of the serious gaps in defense preparations.

Sir Samuel Hoare, the home secretary, in charge of air raids precautions; Leslie Hore-Belisha, the war secretary; and Sir Kingsley Wood, the air secretary, will come in for a share of criticism, but the major attack will be directed against Sir Thomas Inskip, the defense co-ordination minister. No one would be surprised if Sir Thomas were promoted to a less exacting position, say the lord chancellor.

The 68-year-old lord president of the council, Viscount Halifax, may retire altogether from the cabinet, to make room for Lord Runciman, who is 67. Prime Minister Chamberlain is said to be anxious to restore Runciman to the cabinet, as a reward for his work as "unofficial" British mediator at Prague, which paved the way for the more or less peaceful partition of Czechoslovakia.

Fannie Brice Wins Divorce, Silent on Rose's New Love

Los Angeles, Oct. 27 (AP).—Another legal barrier in the romance between Billy Rose, the theatrical promoter, and Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the mermaid, actress, was lifted today when Fannie Brice won a divorce from her man. They were married in February, 1930, and separated in June, 1937.

The stage comedienne, best known for her mournful rendition of "My Man," told a Superior Court judge today Rose deserted her and would not return.

No reference was made to Rose's romance with the former Olympic Games swimmer who was divorced by her singer-husband, Arthur Jarrett, Rose and Miss Holm will be free to marry in a year, when the final decree of today's divorce is granted.

U. S. Sailors See Executions At Hankow

Chinese Pushed in River Shot While Struggling Refugee Zone Shifted

By Victor Koen.
Special Cable to The Post.

Aboard U. S. S. Luzon, Hankow, Oct. 27.—In full view of the United States Navy gunboat Luzon, flagship of the Yangtze River patrol, at least a dozen Chinese were executed here today by Japanese soldiers, who pushed them into the river and shot them.

The Japanese troops were stationed at the Chinese customs house, which is across the street from the boundary of the British concession. It was impossible for the correspondent to see whether the Chinese victims were soldiers or civilians, but in any case many were executed in the vicinity of the customs house. Others were pushed into the river from the pontoon of the Butterfield & Swire Co., a British firm, and the Japanese fired rifles at them as they struggled in the water.

Change Refugee Zone
The plan for a neutral zone for Chinese refugees was disrupted today when Japanese army officials announced they would not recognize the previously designated zone within the British concession, where foreign relief agencies already have spent thousands of dollars in preparations for housing refugees.

The Japanese have designated a new safety zone, situated in the Chinese native city outside the concessions. The refugees now quartered in the former neutral zone will be transferred in the next few days to the new area, which is in charge of the Rev. Robert Jacquinet, French Catholic priest, who managed a similar zone at Shanghai.

British Guard Permitted

Japanese army authorities agreed to permit British blue-jackets and foreign volunteer police to continue to patrol the former British concession temporarily, with the proviso Japanese troops have free access to the Bund, fronting the Yangtze. All the gates of the concession have been closed to the passage of all but authorized persons.

Japanese troops have taken over the German concession, which adjoins the Japanese concession. Japanese soldiers today were conducting a house-to-house search of the concession. In some cases looting of valuables from Chinese property was reported.

Admiral Eijiro Kondo, ranking Japanese naval officer at Hankow, accompanied by Lieut. Comdr. Hiroshima, paid a courtesy call on Rear Admiral David M. Le Breton, commander of the American Yangtze patrol, aboard the Luzon. Le Breton renewed his acquaintance with Hiroshima, who served as assistant naval attaché at Paris when Le Breton was American naval attaché there. The Japanese admiral also called on Rear Admiral R. V. Holt, of the British Yangtze patrol.

12 Arabs Killed, Hundreds Seized; British Lose 7

Haifa, Palestine, Oct. 27 (AP).—Twelve Arabs were killed and hundreds were arrested for questioning today by British forces completing their first drive against Arab insurgents in northern Palestine.

British mobile columns and mountain pickets suffered seven casualties, including an officer.

The Arab dead included Ibrahim Abdullah, insurgent leader from Damascus, and four of his bodyguard, who were caught while changing from their desert robes to uniforms.

The British, in punitive action against snipers, dynamited about 40 houses in the village of Miar, near the town of Acre.

So many were taken into custody the military authorities had to throw up dozens of barbed-wire internment camps.

Jerusalem, Oct. 27 (AP).—Zakal Alhadeef, Jewish mayor of Tiberias, was shot twice and seriously wounded today in an attempted assassination.

Heiress Appeals On Voided Divorce

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Merry Fahrney, by court ruling wife of both an Italian Baron and a Russian Count, moved today to relieve this marital embarrassment through another court action.

The red-headed patent medicine heiress petitioned the Illinois Appellate Court for a rehearing on the case which nullified her divorce from Arturo Berlingieri, of Italy, her third husband, and made her fourth marriage, to Count Oleg Cassini, an act of bigamy.

Attorney Frank Cantwell said that if the petition is denied he will ask permission to appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Hitler Inspects Moravian Lands

Nikolsburg, Germany, Oct. 27 (AP).—Adolf Hitler toured southern parts of Moravia today in an inspection of rich lands annexed to Germany under the peace of Munich.

In a public address Hitler recalled that two brother nations once had made peace here by the 1866 Nikolsburg pact ending the Austro-Prussian war.

"Today," he declared, "the dream of generations has become true, and nevermore shall Germans be separated from Germans."

Work Harder or Lose Liberty, Daladier Warns Countrymen

By Walter Kerr.
Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Oct. 27.—Premier Daladier delivered another warning to his countrymen this afternoon—the third in six months on the same theme—that if they did not work harder and produce more goods they were likely to lose their republican form of government, and possibly their independence.

Speaking at Marseilles before the congress of the Radical Socialist Party, of which he is chairman, the 54-year-old premier said that as things were going the country's expenses next year would total 102,000,000,000 francs and the receipts 66,000,000,000.

"I ask you," he said, "how long can this sort of thing last? Can we eat up the national income this way? Is not this disproportion ruinous to French money? If it persists France will be plunged into bankruptcy."

Asks Longer Hours

But instead of revealing a concrete plan for solving the problem, a plan which he has been trying to work out for weeks, he repeated what he said first on April 28 and again on August 21, that the 40-hour week would have to be enlarged. Employees would have to buy more tools and machinery.

This afternoon he intimated the extension of the 40-hour week would not be confined to factories working for the national defense.

"We don't intend to repeal the 40-hour law," he said, "but it is indispensable, however, wherever the needs of industry and commerce require, to extend the working week and adapt it to the requirements of economic life."

Angry at Reds

Daladier said he was proud of the Munich accord, which he called a "compromise." He grieved out against the Communist Party, for opposing the accord, and for the "violence and intransigence which have paralyzed my action." He assailed the party for stirring up trouble among the work classes, and particularly for accusing him of Fascist leanings.

In foreign policy, he said, the government would continue to rely on its alliance with Great Britain to try and improve relations with Germany and Italy, above all with Germany.

"Hearing the German heart-beat at Munich, I could not help but think, as I thought at Verdun during the war, that between the French and Germans, despite all difficulties, there were powerful reasons for mutual esteem which ought to lead to loyal collaboration."

U. S. Warns Japan to Keep 'Open Door'

Note

In the Chinese customs tariff were called "arbitrary and illegal assumptions of authority for which the Japanese government has an inescapable responsibility."

Japan was bluntly informed that its policies in China "indicate clearly that the Japanese authorities are seeking to establish in areas which have some under Japanese military occupation general preferences for, and superiority of, Japanese interests, an inevitable effect of which will be to frustrate the practical application of the principle of the open door and deprive American nationals of equality of opportunity."

In the State Department's three-point conclusions, it asked Japan to implement former assurances on the open door in China and non-interference with American rights with prompt measures to effect.

Discontinuance of discriminatory exchange control methods having the effect of discriminating against American trade and enterprise in China.

Discontinuance of monopolies or preferences depriving Americans of their Chinese trade rights, or of any arrangements establishing Japanese superiority of commercial rights in China.

Discontinuance of Japanese interference with American property and other rights in China, such as interference with American mail and telegrams, restrictions upon residence and travel by Americans, and restrictions on American trade and shipping.

Early Reply Asked

The Japanese Government was advised to reply at an early date "in the interest of relations between the United States and China."

"Your excellency," the note said, "cannot fail to recognize the existence of a great and growing disparity between the treatment accorded American nationals and their trade and the treatment accorded Japanese nationals and their trade and enterprise by the Government of the United States in areas within its jurisdiction."

Numerous instances were cited of "discrimination" against American dealers through Japanese exchange control methods, through alterations in the Chinese tariff system, through Japanese company controls of communications and other public facilities. Reference also was made to Japanese restrictions on Americans desiring to reoccupy properties from which they were driven by Sino-Japanese hostilities.

Although several steps were open to the United States should Japan reject or ignore this Government's requests, including possible restrictions on Japanese trade in this country supplementing private boycotts already in progress, it was officially pointed out that direct retaliatory action might prove impractical.

American exports to Japan are virtually double the country's importation of Japanese goods. During the first eight months of this year, American shipments to Japan totaled $152,668,000 compared with American purchases from Japan of $77,230,000.

Other alternatives would be denunciation of the 1911 treaty with Japan, or refusal to extend to Japan tariff concessions granted other countries through Secretary Hull's many reciprocal trade agreements.

Reply Date Indefinite

Tokyo, Oct. 27 (AP).—The Japanese foreign office said today that the date of replying to the three-week-old United States warning against closing of the "open door" in China was indefinite.

Concurrently with the note's disclosure in Washington, authoritative sources in Tokyo said Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British ambassador, was scheduled to reopen conversations tomorrow with the Japanese.

It was understood the British envoy was attempting to map adjustment of all difficulties over Japanese occupation in China.

Sources close to the government said Japan would take "a determined stand" in negotiations with foreign powers over rights and privileges previously enjoyed in China. The status of foreign concessions and settlements at Canton, Shanghai, Hankow and Tientsin will be of particular concern.

At the same time Tokyo celebrated occupation of the Hankow district, War Minister Lieut. Gen. Seishiro Itagaki said "the armed dispute between China and Japan will be little affected by the fall of the Wuhan area."

"The victory should not relax the nation's mind," he added. "The people must devote all efforts toward long-term consolidation. The only way to console the spirits of the fallen is to attain the objectives of our holy crusade and thereby meet the expectations of the throne."

Tokyo, however, celebrated the capture of China's erstwhile provisional capital with none of the spontaneity of the rejoicing over earlier victories.

The prevailing atmosphere was one of relief rather than extreme jubilation.

A scattering of people went to the grounds of Emperor Hirohito's palace, where they removed their hats, bowed and called out "Banzai!" Later a huge lantern parade formed as part of the organized festivities.

Text of U. S. Note Warning Japan to Keep 'Open Door' in China

Exchange Control Assailed as Blow to Trade
Return of Property to Americans Demanded
Interference With Mails Condemned

The text of the United States note to Japan concerning that country's policies in China follows:

The Government of the United States has had frequent occasion to make representations to your excellency's government in regard to action taken and policies carried out in China under Japanese authority to which the Government of the United States takes exception as being, in its opinion, in contravention of the principle of equality of opportunity and the "open door" in China. In response to these representations, and in other connections, both public and private, the Japanese government has given categorical assurances that equality of opportunity to the open door in China will be maintained. The Government of the United States is constrained to observe, however, that notwithstanding the assurances of the Japanese government in this regard, violations by Japanese agencies of American rights and interests have persisted.

Recalls Open Door Pledge

As having, by way of illustration, a bearing upon the situation in which the Government of the United States desires to invite the attention of the Japanese government, it is recalled that at the time of the Japanese occupation of Manchuria the Japanese government gave assurances that the open door in Manchuria would be maintained. However, the principal economic activities in that area have been taken over by special companies which are controlled by Japanese nationals and which are established under special charters according to a preferred or exclusive position. A large part of American enterprise which formerly operated in Manchuria has been forced to withdraw from that territory as a result of the Japanese government's action. Arrangements between Japan and the regime now functioning in Manchuria allow the free movement of goods and funds between Manchuria and Japan while restricting rigidly the movement of goods and funds between Manchuria and countries other than Japan.

This channeling of the movement of goods is effected primarily by means of exchange control exercised under the authority of regulations issued under an enabling law which provide expressly that for the purposes of the law Japan shall not be considered a foreign country nor the Japanese yen a foreign currency. In the opinion of our government, equality of opportunity or the open door has virtually ceased to exist in Manchuria, notwithstanding the assurances of the Japanese government that it would be maintained in that area.

Fear Incursions Elsewhere

The Government of the United States is now apprehensive lest there develop in other areas of China which have been occupied by Japanese military forces since the beginning of the present hostilities a situation similar in its adverse effect upon the competitive position of American business to that which now exists in Manchuria.

On April 12, 1938, I had occasion to invite the attention of your excellency's predecessor to reports which had reached the Government of the United States indicating that discrimination in favor of Japanese trade with North China was likely to be effected by means of exchange control and to ask for assurances that the Japanese government would not support or countenance financial measures discriminatory against American interests. Although the minister of foreign affairs stated then that the Japanese government would continue to support the principle of equal opportunity or the open door in China, no specific reply has yet been made by the Japanese government on the subject of these representations.

The Government of the United States now learns that the Japanese authorities at Tientsin have in effect established an exchange control, that they are exercising a discretionary authority to prohibit exports unless export bills are sold to the Yokohama Specie Bank, and that the bank refuses to purchase export bills except at an arbitrary rate far lower than the open market rate prevailing at Tientsin and Shanghai. A somewhat similar situation apparently prevails at Chefoo.

Exchange Control Rumored

Furthermore, reports continue to reach the American Government that a comprehensive system of exchange control will soon be established throughout north China. Control of foreign exchange transactions gives control of trade and commercial enterprise, and the exercise either directly or indirectly, by the Japanese authorities of control of exchange in north China would place those authorities in position to thwart equality of opportunity or free competition between Japan and the United States in that area. In such a situation, imports from and exports to the United States, as well as the choice of dealers in north China, would be entirely subjected to the dispensation of the Japanese authorities. Notwithstanding the short time that exchange control has been enforced in Tientsin, two cases of discrimination have already been brought to the attention of the Government of the United States.

In one instance an American dealer in a staple commodity has been unable to export to the United States because Japanese authorities there have insisted that his export bills be sold to a Japanese bank at a rate so far below the current rate of exchange of the Chinese currency in the open market that such transactions would involve a loss rather than a profit; but a Japanese competitor recently completed a large shipment invoiced at a price in United States dollars which was equivalent to the local market price calculated at the current open market rate. In the other instance, an American firm was prevented from purchasing tobacco in Shanghai unless it should purchase so-called Federal Reserve notes or yen currency with foreign exchange and at an arbitrary and low rate of exchange, conditions not imposed upon the company's Japanese or Chinese competitors.

"Arbitrary and Illegal"

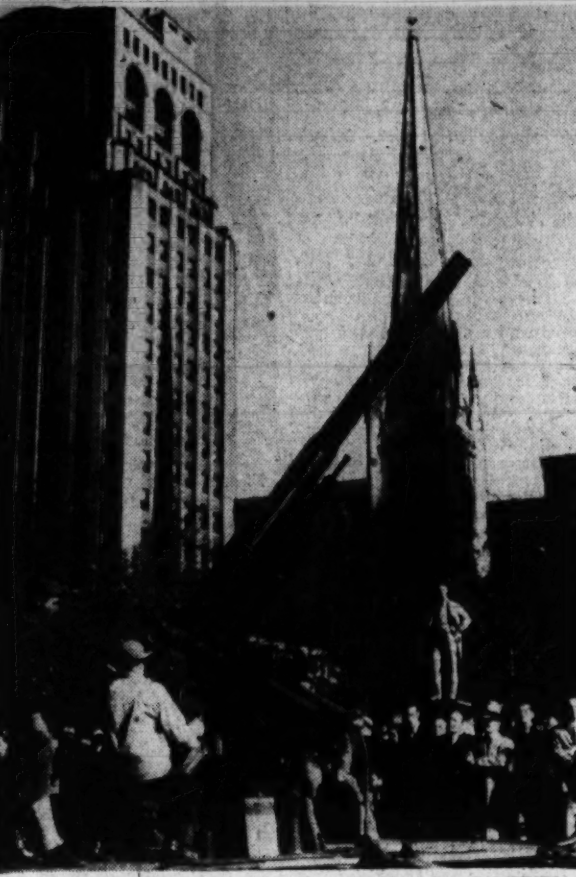

"The Government of the United States has already pointed out to the Japanese government that alterations of the Chinese customs tariff by the regimes functioning in those portions of China occupied by Japanese armed forces and for which the Japanese government has formally assured its support are arbitrary and illegal assumptions of authority for which the Japanese government has an inescapable responsibility. It is hardly necessary to add that there can be no equality of opportunity or open door in China so long as the ultimate authority to regulate, tax, or prohibit trade is exercised, whether directly or indirectly, by the authorities of one foreign power in furtherance of the interests of that power."

It would appear to be self-evident that a fundamental prerequisite of a condition of equality of opportunity or open door in China is the absence in the economic life of that country of preferences or monopolies or rights operating directly or indirectly in favor of any foreign country or its nationals. On July 4, I spoke to Gen. Ugaki of the desirability of the American Government that there be avoided such restrictions and obstacles to American trade and other enterprises as might result from the setting up of special companies and monopolies in China. The minister was so good as to state that the open door in China would be maintained and that the Government of the United States might rest assured that the Japanese government would fully respect the principle of equal opportunity.

Companies Formed

Notwithstanding these assurances, the provisional regime in Peking announced on July 30 the inauguration as of the following day of the China Telephone & Telegraph Co., the reported purpose of this organization being to control and to have exclusive operation of telephone and communications in North China. There was organized in Shanghai on July 31 the Central China Telecommunications Co., and the special service section of the Japanese army has informed foreign cable and telegraph companies that the new company proposes to control all the tele-communications in Central China. According to a semi-official Japanese press report, there was organized at Shanghai on July 28 the Shanghai Inland Navigation Steamship Co., to be controlled by Japanese, the reported object of which is to control water transportation in the Shanghai Delta area.

According to information which has reached my government, a Japanese company has been organized to take over and operate the wharves at Tsingtao which have hitherto been publicly owned and operated. Should such a development occur, all shipping of whatever nationality would become dependent upon a Japanese agency for allotments of space and stevedoring facilities. The wool trade in North China is now reported to be a Japanese monopoly and a tobacco monopoly in that area is reported to be in process of formation. Moreover, according to numerous reports which have been reaching my government, the Japanese government is proceeding with the organization of two special promotion companies which it has chartered and which it will control with the object of investing in, unifying, and regulating the administration of certain large sectors of economic enterprise in China.

The developments of which I have made mention are illustrative of the apparent trend of Japanese policy in China and indicate clearly that the Japanese authorities are seeking to establish in areas which have been under Japanese military occupation general preferences for, and superiority of, Japanese interests, an inevitable effect of which will be to frustrate the practical application of the principle of the open door and deprive American nationals of equal opportunity.

I desire also to call your excellency's attention to the fact that unwarranted restrictions placed by the Japanese military authorities upon American nationals in China—notwithstanding the existence of American treaty rights in China and the repeated assurances of the Japanese government that steps had been taken which would insure that American nationals, interests, and properties would not be subject to unlawful interference by Japanese authorities—further subject American interests to continuing serious inconvenience and hardship. Reference is made especially to the restrictions placed by the Japanese military upon American nationals who desire to re-enter and re-occupy properties from which they have been driven by the hostilities and of which the Japanese military have been or still are in occupation. Mention may also be made of the Japanese censorship of and interference with American mail and telegrams at Shanghai, and of restrictions upon freedom of trade, residence and travel by Americans, including the use of railways, shipping, and other facilities.

While Japanese merchant vessels are carrying Japanese merchandise between Shanghai and Nanking, those vessels decline to carry merchandise of other countries, and American and other non-Japanese shipping is excluded from the lower Yangtze valley on the grounds of military necessity. Applications by American nationals for passes which would allow them to return to certain areas in the lower Yangtze valley have been denied by the Japanese authorities on the ground that peace and order have not been sufficiently restored, although many Japanese merchants and their families are known to be in those areas.

"Unwarranted Interference"

American nationals and their interests have suffered serious losses in the Far East arising from causes directly attributable to the present conflict between Japan and China, and even under the most favorable conditions an early rehabilitation of American enterprise in China and of American trade with China cannot be expected. The American Government, therefore, finds it all the more difficult to reconcile itself to a situation in which American nationals must contend with continuing unprovoked interference with their rights at the hands of the Japanese authorities in China and with Japanese actions and policies which operate to deprive American trade and enterprise of equality of opportunity in China. It is also pertinent to mention that in Japan, too, American trade and other interests are undergoing severe hardships as a result of the industrial, trade, exchange and other controls which the Japanese government has imposed incident to its military operations in China. While American interests in the Far East have been thus treated at the hands of the Japanese authorities, the Government of the United States has not sought either in its own territory or in the territory of third countries to establish or influence the establishment of embargoes, import prohibitions, exchange controls, preferential restrictions, monopolies or special companies designed to eliminate or having the effect of eliminating Japanese trade and enterprise. In its treatment of Japanese nationals and their trade and enterprise, the American Government has been guided not only by the letter and spirit of the Japanese-American commercial treaty of 1911, but by those fundamental principles of international law and order which have formed the basis of its policy in regard to all peoples and their interests; and Japanese commerce and enterprise have continued to enjoy in the United States equality of opportunity.

Asks Prompt Action

Your excellency cannot fail to recognize the existence of a great and growing disparity between the treatment accorded American Nationals and their trade and enterprise by Japanese authorities in China and Japan and the treatment accorded Japanese nationals and their trade and enterprise by the Government of the United States in areas within its jurisdiction.

In the light of the situation herein reviewed, the Government of the United States asks that the Japanese government implement its assurances already given with regard to the maintenance of the open door and to noninterference with American rights by taking prompt and effective measures to cause:

- (1) The discontinuance of discriminatory exchange control and of other measures imposed in areas in China under Japanese control which operate either directly or indirectly to discriminate against American trade and enterprise;
- (2) The discontinuance of any monopoly or of any preference which would deprive American nationals of the right of undertaking any legitimate trade or industry in China, or of any arrangement which might purport to establish in favor of Japanese interests any general superiority of

Talked to War Aides Involves Griebel 'Money No Object'

Griebel spoke with Karl Schlueter, another fugitive defendant, who was then a steward on the Europa. When the ship reached Bremen, Schlueter introduced Dr. Griebel to Capt. Lieut. Erich Pfeiffer, in charge of naval intelligence at Bremen, who is also a fugitive defendant.

Pfeiffer, in turn, gave Dr. Griebel an introduction to Von Bonin and Menzel in Berlin. Miss Moog said Dr. Griebel invited her to lunch with these two officers in Berlin, and they were introduced to her under the names of Mueller and Schmidt.

"They thought I could assist them in making social contacts in Washington," Miss Moog said, "that they might have the opportunity to explain National Socialism to the real American people, to Congressmen, Senators, leading politicians and newspapermen."

"Did they suggest that you rent a villa in Washington for the purpose of entertaining these people?" asked John W. Burke, Jr., assistant United States attorney.

"Money No Object"

"Yes," replied Miss Moog. She said Von Bonin and Menzel were "very kind gentlemen" who said that "money would be no object," but since neither she nor Dr. Griebel made any direct answer to the proposal, the method of paying for the house was not discussed in detail.

Mrs. Elizabeth Beck, Lonkowski's sister-in-law, said she saw Lonkowski on the night of September 28, 1935, at the house of Miss Senta de Wagner, in Hempstead, where the Lonkowskis were then living. Earlier that day Lonkowski had been questioned by customs authorities and the authorities had kept his package of documents and told him to return in two or three days.

Mrs. Beck said Dr. Griebel brought his automobile to Hempstead and drove off with Lonkowski. Later, she said, she received a letter from Lonkowski in Canada, relating he had "crossed the border without any trouble through the help of Dr. G."

and that "I have driven the car for the doctor, driving between 85 and 90 miles per hour." The letter was placed in evidence.

She said Mrs. Lonkowski after Lonkowski's departure, and said that "Mrs. Lonkowski told me he was working for the German government."

Mrs. Beck also told of driving to Buffalo earlier in the summer with the Lonkowskis. In Buffalo, she said, Lonkowski saw Werner George Gudenberg, then an employee of the Curtiss-Wright airplane plant and now a fugitive defendant. She said Lonkowski took a letter from the defendant Voss to Gudenberg and immediately after the visit drove to Canada and mailed a letter to her husband, but neither she nor Mrs. Beck had heard any conversation between the two men.

Courtroom spectators were startled when Burke unwrapped a large machine gun, which he set on the rail of the jury box. Lieut. Comdr. Daniel V. Gallery, identified one of the papers as a sketch of machine-gun sights "of modern design used on present naval planes." He explained the sketch to the jury, using the machine gun as a model.

Alexander Noble, chief draftsman of the airplane division, identified enlargements of photographic negatives found on Lonkowski as pictures of blueprints of construction details of an experimental scout bomber constructed for the Navy in 1935.

John Albert Williams, assistant general manager of the airplane division, said the bomber was delivered to the Navy in April, 1936, and the plans photographed "had a confidential status" until February 15, 1938. At that time the Navy Department released the plans, he said, except for some details "which are still confidential."

Other witnesses of the day included Col. Henry W. T. Eglin, commanding officer of Fort Totten, Bay Side, Queens, who said he was aware as early as last January there was a ruse about to obtain coast mobilization plan from him. Corp. Gustave Schmidt, U. S. Army, testified he had received three letters signed in the name of the defendant Glaser, Rumrich, on the stand, told of his scheme to overpower Col. then already in service.—Editor's note.]

Before the arrest of Dr. Brody the permanent parliamentary committee, under President-Premier Jan Syrový, ordered suspension of his parliamentary immunity. This was done to make possible his trial in Uhrovd, seat of the autonomous Ruthenian government.

Brody, who quit his cabinet post after vainly seeking a compromise with Hungary, was replaced by Mgr. Augustin Volosin, former undersecretary in the Ruthenian government, who will conduct any future negotiations with Hungary affecting the status of Ruthenia.

Hungary's new note complained that Czechoslovakia had failed to give any sort of satisfaction to Hungarian demands for plebiscites in Slovakia and Ruthenia.

"The Hungarian reply," it was announced, "protested that the Czechoslovak government had not made any direct answer to the question of plebiscites for the (Magyar) minorities in Slovakia and Ruthenia and also demanded that the territory in which there is a Magyar majority be removed from arbitration."

"On the other hand, the Hungarian government expressed satisfaction that the Czech government, like the Hungarian government, is inspired by a wish to reach a sincere, rapid and complete agreement."

"The Hungarian note contains a number of proposals regarding arbitration. Before the Czech government can formulate a reply it is necessary to convene another plenary meeting."

The reference to a meeting was taken to mean a joint session of the Prague, Slovak and Ruthenian cabinets.

The Syrový government, in its answer to Hungary's terms for resumption of territorial negotiations, agreed to let Germany and Italy act as arbiters, if necessary, but insisted Rumania must be brought into the arbitration if Poland is included. Hungary had asked the inclusion of Poland.

The Czech reply also opposed the Hungarian plebiscite proposals and asked that arbitration be applied, not only to areas of "disputed" racial nationality, but to all areas covered in the territorial issue with Hungary.

tico, Va., demonstrated field artillery used by the corps.

At dusk, after the return of President Roosevelt and Cardinal Muench, a sham battle was staged between gaudily garbed "insurrectos," portrayed by sailors from the receiving ship at the Navy Yard and marines from Quantico.

Theoretically the insurrectos fired on American gunboats and the marines—using Coast Guard boats—landed and demolished their fortifications. During the "engagement" planes scudded and dived overhead as tanks dashed across the field and splintered the wooden fortifications.

Exercises Throughout City

Throughout the city patriotic services were held. Exercises were conducted at the John Barry statue, on Fourteenth street between I and K northwest, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

Capt. Clarence N. Hinkamp, of the Naval Examining Board, was the principal speaker at services at the John Paul Jones memorial held under the auspices of the Military Order of the World.

"So long as the millennium has not arrived," he declared, "the strong will rule, and the Navy is the first evidence of strength."

Recalling that "all but one of our foreign wars, generally speaking, were found to uphold our policy of the 'freedom of the seas,'" he stated:

"It will probably be some incident at sea that will precipitate our entry into another war. Should our Navy be inadequate, other navies will make inroads on our commerce, sink our ships, confiscate our cargoes, and delay our vessels on their legitimate voyages."

"But if we have a Navy ready, powerful enough to be effective, our probable enemies will listen to what we have to say."

Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson, in a letter to Secretary of the Navy Swanson, said "you have our heartfelt best wishes for the success and happiness of the gallant Navy and its fighting men of the sea."

Gen. Malin Craig, Army Chief of Staff, wrote Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, that the Army was "ever inspired by the devotion to duty and fine traditions of loyalty which have characterized our Navy's long and glorious history."

Swanson replied, "Please accept my warmest personal regards and my best wishes for the success and continuing high state of efficiency of the American Army—an Army that has never failed our country in the hour of need."

Admiral Leahy, in a message to Gen. Craig, expressed "personal appreciation of the able assistance that has been given us without fail by you and those under your command in the solution of our naval problems."

Put on Full Dress

In ports on the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts, in the Mediterranean, Caribbean and the Far East, all American warships put on full dress. Sham battles, aircraft demonstrations and addresses by naval officers, played a part in celebrations in many communities.

Observers noted that 24 warships have been commissioned since last Navy Day, including the aircraft carrier Enterprise, and five cruisers. Seventy-five craft, including six 35,000-ton battleships, either are on the ways or about to be started. A year ago only 64 were being built.

Only Great Britain rivals the Navy in ships afloat or building. Latest figures showed 84 British warcraft under construction, aggregating 502,645 tons, compared with 463,000 new American tonnage.

Britain has 377 ships aggregating 1,738,478 tons, against 419 American vessels of 1,514,585 tons.

Further appropriations for the Navy are expected during the coming year. Mr. Roosevelt has predicted that the Navy in 1939 will receive at least $150,000,000 more beyond the $619,000,000 supplied for the current fiscal year—an 18-year record.

The Navy wants the funds to start work on two more battleships, four cruisers, eight destroyers and eight submarines. On the drafting boards are understood to be plans for two battleships of 45,000 tons, larger than any dreadnaughts ever built. The President must decide when they should be undertaken. The Navy also wants authority to modernize 5 of its present 15 battleships and to build a base on Kodiak Island, near Sitka, Alaska.

U. S. Fire Control Council to Meet

The Federal Fire Council, which makes surveys and establishes standards to prevent fires in Federal buildings, will meet at 2 p. m. today in Room 43 of the New National Museum Building.

On the docket are discussion of fire prevention in the Civilian Conservation Corps, Works Progress Administration, Government Printing Office, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Social Security Board quarters, and District Compensation Board headquarters.

The council is composed of representatives from the Bureau of Standards and various Government departments. Director Lyman J. Briggs, of the Bureau of Standards, is chairman, and S. H. Ingberg, secretary.

Along with their fight to get their room furnished they also have been trying to get possession of it.

"I'm sorry you asked to see the Tennessee room first," Estes Scott, guide at hall, told a visitor yesterday. "You'll see why after we've been there. They've had a little trouble."

Won't Give Up Room

He pointed out the mahogany desk, fashioned to look like a chest of drawers—with the top "drawer" pulling down to form a desk. But he did not mention the lamented top. "That's all they have in here except that picture of the Hermitage," he said as he pointed out how the office filing closet took up one big side of the room, anyway.

Although small, even before the closet was put in, the Tennessee room has the "advantage" of being on the main floor. This is a position the Daughters have refused to relinquish, despite urgings of the national body, which in 1929 begged the State to accept the large basement room now occupied by Oklahoma—or even the larger basement room now occupied by North Carolina.

2 Boys Injured When Hit by Autos

Two children were injured seriously while playing in the streets yesterday.

Six-year-old Joseph Edmonds, of 233 Twelfth place northeast, was struck by an automobile while attempting to cross the street at Eleventh and B streets northeast. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where his condition is said to be undetermined. The driver, Mrs. Elizabeth Wilkins, of 7900 Thirteenth street, was not held.

Joseph Frederick, 13, of 48 Myrtle street northeast, suffered head injuries when struck by an automobile in front of 48 H street northwest. His condition was described as serious at Casualty Hospital.

Ask Doctor About This Ideal Way TO LOSE FAT

READ EVERY WORD!

Make up your mind now that you'll lose some of that ugly fat and really enjoy life. No one can blame you if you don't want to take harmful drugs, go on starvation diets and do backbreaking exercises. No sane woman would! And for sensible women like yourself who really want to reduce yet don't expect miracles overnight—who are willing to faithfully follow a most simple, inexpensive and pleasant 28 day plan (women considerably overweight naturally require longer periods), we suggest this easy plan.

First of all go light on fatty foods and sweets. Eat plentifully of lean meats, fresh fruits and vegetables. And for proper functioning be sure to take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in hot water every morning. And let's not let this strain right now about Kruschen.

It is not harmful. It is NOT just one salt as some people may mistakenly believe. Look on the box! You'll see it is a blend of 4 active mineral salts, which when dissolved in water is similar to the famous medicinal waters of European spas where wealthy fat people have come for years. A jar of Kruschen costs but a few cents and makes 5 saloons of marvelous mineral health water. Get a jar RIGHT AWAY! At drugstore everywhere.

dustries, and in the manufacture of confectionery, fertilizers and millinery. There also were substantial additions to the personnel in clothing, silk and rayon goods and cotton textile factories.

The employment gain of 5.9 per cent in retail trade was larger than seasonal and indicated the hiring of 184,000 workers since August, said Miss Perkins.

Meeting Planned

Meanwhile the Associated Press reported that efforts are being made to arrange a meeting today or tomorrow of the Presidential committee which has been working on a program of large-scale expenditures by private utilities.

The committee, which includes Secretary Ickes, Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities Commission, and Basil Manley, Federal Power Commissioner, already has conferred with heads of several utility systems.

Though no hint of the extent of the program has come from any of the group, Wall Street has heard estimates ranging from several hundred millions to $5,000,000,000.

The proposed expenditures are intended to provide adequate power facilities in event of war and to stimulate the heavy industries.

ing present. Both deplored the "attack" by the committee's witnesses on Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan.

Dies disregarded their statement as he disregarded President Roosevelt's charge that the committee had allowed itself to be used for partisan political purposes by disgruntled Republicans. The President protested after witnesses had accused Murphy of "treasonable" activities during the 1937 sit-down strikes.

Dies sent Healey and Dempsey messages informing them of the committee's decision. He said it would be "cowardly" to stop the hearings now. "That would imply," he wrote, "that the Democratic Party is unwilling for the people to have the facts when they go to the polls."

"Eminently Fair."

"But even from a party standpoint, I am convinced that it is better for Democrats to take the initiative and fearlessly expose subversive activities that threaten the very existence of the Republic, even if in doing so a few candidates for office on the Democratic ticket are involved."

"The committee's proceedings are eminently fair," he added that many witnesses were recommended by outstanding Democrats and said he would expedite hearings, as the committee's funds are running out. He concluded: "Our committee is an agency of an independent branch of the Government, and any successful attempt to stifle the hearings for political purposes would be most unfortunate."

The "surprise witness," so heralded by Dies, turned out to be J. E. Creighton, of Lansing, Mich., a newspaper reporter.

Creighton's testimony followed the previous pattern of Michigan witnesses on the sit-down strikes, and stressed the "Labor Holiday" held in Lansing last year. He told the committee that between 3,000 and 4,000 persons gathered at the State capitol in June to protest the arrest of workers held for violating anti-picketing court orders. The arrests were affirmed later by the State Supreme Court, said Creighton.

The "Lansing Holiday," Creighton said, put the city in the hands of the workmen, and closed many stores and business places.

In the afternoon Gov. Murphy, according to Creighton, strode out on the capitol steps and addressed the throng. He testified Murphy said:

"I am urging those in Government and industry to recognize new conditions. There will be no injustices practiced upon you while the Governor can prevent it. It is not necessary for you to do one extreme thing. You will get what you want and you know it."

"This Government must protect you from arbitrary and dictatorial judgments."

Creighton told Dies it was a "reasonable inference" that Murphy had referred to the injunction concerning picketing methods. The injunction in question had prohibited "duress and intimidation" in picketing a plant under strike.

Dies asked Creighton about a press conference held two weeks later. Creighton, saying he remembered it very clearly, told Dies that he and his associates were curious as to Murphy's belief of the "holiday's" origin. Dies asked what the Governor had said on that point. Creighton answered:

"He said he believed it had been conceived and executed by Communists."

Dies read aloud a letter he had written President Homer Martin, of the United Auto Workers, affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, granting Martin's request to be excused from testifying.

Martin, implying the committee was unfair, said he did not wish to "open old wounds" by appearing at this time. Recently four U. A. W. officials whom Martin had accused of Communism and ousted were reinstated by C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis.

Dies wrote Martin: "I deeply regret that as a warm friend and supporter of Gov. Murphy you do not see fit to appear. You say that we have permitted partisanship to enter the investigation. This question is much bigger than partisanship. It involves the future of the Republic."

Dies noted what he termed "the terrific pressure you have been subjected to to prevent your appearance before our committee." He quoted at length from some of Martin's speeches denouncing communism in the letter.

The flood of denials of asserted communism continued to pour into the committee yesterday from all quarters. Among them was a protest from Upton Sinclair, novelist and pamphleteer.

Mr. Kennedy Hesitates

Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, of Maryland, is still undecided about accepting the chairmanship of the House District Committee. He has indicated that his decision will depend upon the amount of support promised him by Congressional leaders and the President. And Mr. Kennedy is thoroughly justified in taking this attitude. It would be folly for him to give up the useful and important chairmanship of the Claims Committee unless he has reasonable assurance that he will be aided in his efforts to deal effectively with District problems.

Having been a member of the District Committee for three terms Mr. Kennedy has acquired a first-hand knowledge of local conditions. This experience, plus his natural abilities and his objective viewpoint, equips him admirably for the difficult and responsible task of chairman. Being an experienced politician, however, Mr. Kennedy is well aware of the fact that neither knowledge nor ability can by themselves overcome an apathetic attitude in Congress toward District problems.

By the time Congress convenes a wealth of material should be available as a basis for legislation to improve the governmental, financial and economic position of the District. A study of local governmental problems, for which Mr. Kennedy himself was largely instrumental, is nearing completion, as is the relief inquiry conducted under the direction of Burdette G. Lewis. The District advisory tax committee will also be ready by January to report its recommendations to the Joint Internal Revenue Committee.

Thus a foundation has been laid for carrying out what Mr. Kennedy rightly calls the "big job that needs to be done here." It appears that he would be willing to undertake this onerous and rather thankless task provided only that he can depend upon the support and encouragement of the Congress and the executive authorities who hold the fate of the District in their hands. In fairness to Washington these assurances should be given.

Election In Chile

The election, now confirming Pedro Aguirre Cerda as President of Chile, marks a real political upset in that important South American nation, so much so that there is a real chance it may be followed by a period of disorder.

Aguirre ran as a candidate of a coalition of Liberal and Radical parties banded together in a Popular Front along French and Spanish lines. He was opposed by a man who had the support of Right wing parties which for some years have ruled the roost in Chile. This makes Aguirre's victory, if victory it proves to be, all the more striking since, as a rule, government-supported candidates have the inner track in Latin-American elections and rarely fail to make the grade regardless of popular sentiment.

One curious bit of by-play in the Chilean election was the role of the Nacistas, the Chilean variant of the German Nazi movement although without direct ties to Berlin. Last month the Nacistas staged an uprising at Santiago which was speedily put down by the government although not until after considerable blood had been shed.

Implicated in this abortive putsch was the former dictator, Gen. Ibanez, who, however, has since been absolved of any complicity in the plot to seize power. But the uprising so damaged his candidacy for President that he felt himself compelled to withdraw. Oddly enough, this action aided the Popular Front candidate to whom the Nacistas then threw their support even though the Left coalition is anything if not anti-Fascist and anti-Nazi. Their dislike of the government which had suppressed the September putsch was far greater than that for their ideological opposites.

Whether Aguirre will be allowed to assume office is not yet certain. The defeated candidate, Gustavo Ross, has announced his intention to challenge the validity of his rival's victory and with government assistance may upset it. But even if Aguirre does come into power it must not be assumed that he will sponsor any radical or revolutionary policies.

Although supported in his bid for the Presidency by Socialists and Communists among other Left parties he is himself a Radical, which, as not infrequently happens to political nomenclature, no longer means in Chile what the dictionary meaning of the term suggests it does. The Chilean Radical Party is not radical at all but is decidedly middle-of-the-road.

Accord In Local Housing

While details of the agreement between the Federal and District housing agencies have not been revealed, it is obvious that a constructive compromise has been effected. In many respects that is the most significant development in the field of local housing since the creation of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Without regard for specific terms concerning subsidies, rentals, costs and other details of the local projects, Washington will be delighted to know that the work of slum clearance is to be accelerated. The Capital City has some of the worst slums in the entire country. Had the United States Housing Authority and the ADA failed to iron out their differences, and to make Federal funds available for this work, that outcome would have been a serious indictment of both.

As matters stand both Administrator Straus, of the USHA, and John Ihlder, executive officer of the ADA, are entitled to hearty congratulations upon their ability to subordinate personal views to the public interest. A stubborn attitude on the part of either would have wrecked the local slum clearance program, for their differences have been fundamental in character. Now that an agreement has been reached, however, the width of the gulf between them merely emphasizes the statesmanlike attitude that has been essential to effect a compromise.

Mr. Straus gave a key to the undisclosed agreement when he said: "Mr. Ihlder has submitted an admirable program." This means, of course, that the ADA has modified the original application which was criticized by Mr. Straus. But it also seems to mean that the USHA has accepted, for the purpose of this loan, the basic principle for which the ADA has been contending. For Mr. Straus clearly indicated that it is Mr. Ihlder's program which is about to be accepted.

This in turn suggests that blanket rental subsidies will not be in effect here—that some of the tenants to be housed will be self-supporting while others will be drawn from the very lowest income group. The ADA has insisted that housing aid should be granted on a family basis. Its first proposal was to charge three-fourths of its prospective tenants rents that would cover all costs. Funds saved because of tax exemption for the project would have been used to reduce the rents of the remaining one-fourth.

If a way has now been found to supplement a 90 per cent USHA loan by a 10 per cent local loan, Federal subsidies to the ADA projects can be made available. It would not be necessary, however, to apply them uniformly to all dwelling units built by the ADA. Rather they could be applied on the basis of actual family need so as to accommodate a wide range of tenants from relief families, up to those in the higher brackets of the low-income group for whom private enterprise is not making adequate provision.

It is not necessary, however, to speculate prematurely upon the precise terms of the agreement. The fact that the ADA submitted a program which the administrator of the USHA considers "admirable" is sufficient to portend a successful large-scale attack upon Washington's slums. The community has every reason to be gratified over such a happy solution of a truly intricate conflict of policy.

Warning To Tokyo

The American note to Tokyo, protesting against Japan's closing of the Open Door in China, is as important for its timing as for its substance. It is made public at a moment when, following the occupation of Canton and Hankow, Japan's dream of dominating China appears near fulfillment.

Already, in anticipation of that development, grandiose plans have been worked out in Tokyo for the exploitation of the conquered nation to the exclusion of foreign interests. Inspired sources in Japan are now talking of the necessity of eliminating in China all the rights and privileges which for many decades the western powers, including the United States, have enjoyed there.

It is of the utmost significance, therefore, that at this particular moment the United States should have raised its voice in strong protest against Japan's actions, past and contemplated, tending to make China the private preserve of the island empire. As this note makes clear, Japan is pursuing south of the Great Wall the same destructive tactics with regard to equal economic opportunities in China that she has carried out in Manchuria. There, as the note says, "a large part of American enterprise . . . has been forced to withdraw . . . as a result of the preferences in force."

Will this note stop Japan? If it does it will not be because the case made by the United States for the continuance of the Open Door in China is legally incontrovertible and morally sound. It will be because the present protest to Tokyo is more than a catalogue of grievances; it also embodies a veiled if unmistakable threat of retaliation.

In contrast to the actions of Japan in the Far East, says the note, the United States has not sought "to establish or influence the establishment of embargoes, import prohibitions, exchange controls, preferential restrictions, monopolies or special companies designed to eliminate or having the effect of eliminating Japanese trade and enterprise."

The clear intimation is that two can play the Japanese game. In view of the very considerable Japanese dependence on the American market, and on American sources of supply both for military and civil purposes, application by the United States to Japanese trade of restrictive measures could have a disastrous effect on the island empire. Indeed, had such measures been taken earlier Japan might never have made the military progress she has on the mainland.

Drunk with victory, the Japanese militarists may ignore this latest of a long line of American protests. But the temper of the present note shows that American patience is wearing thin. Japan would thus be well-advised not to treat lightly the American demands for the discontinuance of discriminatory exchange control, of trade monopolies that deprive American nationals of the right to engage in legitimate trade or industry in China, of interference with American property and other forms of interference she has indulged in.

The purely economic and financial weapons which the United States can employ, in defense of its interests in the Far East, are formidable and there is every reason why, if need be, they should be used.

Conditions Of Peace

It is not surprising that the President's radio speech on Wednesday night should have drawn a hostile reaction from the German press. Certain of the conditions which he laid down as essential for a durable peace are particularly lacking in that country. Nowhere else is there equal applicability for the assertion that: "There can be no peace if national policy adopts as a deliberate instrument the dispersion all over the world of millions of helpless and persecuted wanderers with no place to lay their heads."

But none who have studied Mr. Roosevelt's speech carefully will regard it as in any way a belligerent address. His purpose, very clearly, was to point out that a peace obtained by surrender to recurrent threats of force is not one which inspires faith or confidence. "Certain fundamental reciprocal obligations are involved." None should be in a better position to see the cogency of this reasoning than Chancellor Hitler, whose disintegrating attack on the Treaty of Versailles was based on its sweeping disregard of the reciprocal obligations which Mr. Roosevelt now demands.

The approach to present world conditions chosen by Mr. Roosevelt is more constructive than that of his predecessor in the White House. Mr. Hoover, also speaking to the annual current problems forum of the New York Herald Tribune, suggested that there are a dozen reasons, and specified several, why the United States should not take sides against an alignment of dictatorships.

The trouble with that argument lies in the tacit encouragement it gives to those who wish to amplify the policy of aggression. Mr. Roosevelt directed this country's vast influence in a more positive direction. He voiced no threats to other countries but he did make clear that the search for peace must be by collective effort, including active American participation. Peace worthy of the name cannot be obtained by progressive surrenders, bringing the whetted appetite of aggression ever nearer to the New World, but only by fulfillment of essential conditions to which all nations must mutually subscribe.

President Roosevelt's remarks were the more notable because they revised somewhat the observations made by Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy in London a week ago. Mr. Kennedy then asserted that "it is unproductive for both democratic and dictator countries to widen the division now existing between them by emphasizing their differences." The argument of Mr. Roosevelt's appointee in London, in other words, was closer to that advanced by Mr. Hoover on Wednesday night than to the position now taken by Mr. Kennedy's chief.

The President's viewpoint, as now outlined, is that it is not foolish, but very wise, to emphasize the differences in the ideals actuating dictatorships and democracies. Only by appreciating these differences, and establishing a modus vivendi which does not call for the submergence of one system by the other, can systems so distinct cohabit peacefully in a constantly narrowing world.

London is sending a committee to the United States to study traffic control. We have no idea where they'll find any.

"Under secret service rules, one who approaches the President must do so with empty hands." Palms up?

It's too late to try to read the handwriting on the wall when your back's to it.

"I don't see what holds up a woman's strapless evening gown," declares a paragrapher. Brother, you're not supposed to.

Letters to the Editor

'Who Started It?'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An Administration spokesman having pleaded for a let-up on name-calling, economic saber-rattling, etc., and having asked of business a more co-operative spirit toward the New Deal, it may be pertinent to ask who started it all, anyhow. Business has been under a long-time draft as angel for a full-time Santa Claus whose gifts have been germ-carriers in a nation-wide epidemic of pensionitis. To ask business to lend a more cheerful and obliging aspect to its role, in face of the mountainous and mounting bill of costs, is somewhat like inviting small dealers to a more kindly regard for the stink-bomb racketeers who horn in on their profits.

Industrial capital and labor are joint producers of all wealth. From their combined activities arise the values that attach to land from which all wealth is drawn. When, if ever, will capital and labor come to realize their community of interest in wealth production and combine to protect the product from unconscionable raids of political gangsters?

If and when they shall come to a unity of thought in economic rather than political terms, it may then occur to them that the law of a nation is its one great public utility. The next thought in the interest of a well-rounded democratic rule should be as to a best means of delivering that utility from the clutches of an exploiting class whose immemorial privilege, under Government protection, has been to reap where others have sown. WALTER N. CAMPBELL, Washington, October 9.

Note Of Appreciation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our Bible class desires to thank you most sincerely for the space allotted in your paper to the publication of news and notes of the Organized Bible Class Association of Washington, D. C.

We also desire to take this opportunity of thanking you for having one of your church editors, Mr. Allen, present at our banquet on September 29, a report of which appeared in The Post on the following morning.

The Neglected Maritime Memorial

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In all the articles about Navy Day and the coming celebration scarcely one mention is made of our only Sea Memorial—the Naval and Maritime Memorial—which stands undisturbed and abandoned in our Capital. It has stood during five years. Indeed, some not very friendly hand has attempted to obliterate it little by little from the sight of the public by planting bushes and trees around it, a matter which has provoked a protest from Guizot Borglum.

I have the privilege of being one of the largest contributors to this memorial. A group of patriotic men and women undertook years ago to erect this enduring tribute of gratitude to the men who during the 300 years of our national life have served us on the seas. To the heroic deeds of these men—in peace as well as in war—are due the glories which we prepare to celebrate on Navy Day. This group of true Americans devoted their time, efforts and money under the sponsorship of three Secretaries of the Navy to the realization of this

Soon To Be Shown

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having been in more than half the States in recent weeks, from California to New Jersey, and having made a close survey for my committee of the political situation in some of the so-called doubtful States, I do not hesitate to say that Dr. Gallup's latest "alleged" poll in connection with the Congressional elections will prove to be very inaccurate. The fact is, Dr. Gallup has gone "haywire."

My guess is that he will change his figures before November 8. His prediction there will be a Democratic loss of 68 in the House is absurd. Democrats will not lose half that number. On the other hand, the Democrats will make gains in certain States, for example Massachusetts. My information and belief is that the Democrats will gain from three to five seats in that State alone.

With one automobile concern putting 35,000 men to work this week and others following with a restoration of pay cuts and the increase of wages, there is no question but what another Democratic landslide is awaiting the country on November 8. The minority party, running true to form, is simply trying to bolster up the courage of the faithful few who are still blindly following the G. O. P.

"Rung By Rung"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In China's dire distress what must she think of her former "friends"—Britain, France and America?

Had parts of their combined navies stood off the Japanese coast, as this world horror was brewing, could not this conflagration have been snuffed out at its start? That might have been "policing Asia" to some extent, but it would have been worth it. A million Chinese lives have been sacrificed and untold millions of property destroyed that will take generations to replace, and a great reversion to barbarism enacted which blackens the pages of modern history!

And the "peace" of Munich—what a piece of weakness! Lloyd George says: "We have descended during these years the ladder of dishonor rung by rung. Are we just—and we go—any lower?" Can justice and confidence of nations live again? Let us hope so. H. BRADFORD, Bethesda, Md., Oct. 27.

The General Welfare Act

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of October 14 you used an entire column to publish comments (not authentic information), on the subject of annuities for elderly people, by Westbrook Pegler. When an entire column of supposedly valuable space is used, the public has a right to expect that the writer has at least taken the trouble to inform himself, on the subject on which he undertakes to write. This information can be secured by going to the Congressional Record and studying the measure (H. R. 4199) which was introduced in Congress in February, 1937. It is based on a "pay-as-you-go" system and will force money into circulation—and keep it there, which will cure this man-made depression, which was caused by the hoarding of the great wealth of our country in the hands of the few.

This measure would be inexpensive to administer, would obligate the Government in no way whatever as to the amount paid annuitants, because the revenue to pay the annuities would be raised either by a transaction tax of 2 per cent on the gross income tax of 2 per cent, whichever Congress decides upon in the next session, when two separate bills will be introduced, one favoring the transaction tax, the other advocating the gross income tax. The revenue will be divided pro rata among those 60 years or over, after expense of administration has been deducted. Penalties are provided for spending these annuities on able-bodied persons for luxuries or to keep any able-bodied person in idleness. An annuitant is prohibited from giving over 10 per cent of the annuity even for legitimate charity.

During the last session of Congress over 160 Congressmen requested a hearing on this general welfare act, but it was suppressed by politicians because it conflicts with the so-called social security act, which is extremely expensive to administer. It is subject to much graft in various States, does not cover all workers who are entitled to old-age compensation and security, in fact, covers only about 50 per cent. Instead of putting money into circulation, as the general welfare act will do, the social security act takes money out of circulation from both the employer and employee and provides merely a pittance for unfortunate indigent elderly people who may survive to the age of 65. OLIVIA MEGREW, Washington, Oct. 16.

"Blood Offering"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We may deplore the spirit of war and contention, but to deny its existence or that any good can come from it were to write one's self down an irredeemable fool. It is in evidence everywhere, from the American Senate to the country clown. To argue against the war spirit is like whistling in the teeth of a north wind. You cannot alter a psychological condition with a made-to-order editorial.

When we consider how easily and quickly the United States was regimented into the World War such a short time ago, and if we can remember all the "ballyhoo" that accompanied it, can we intelligently believe this nation to have been converted from its folly? No, the age of "blood offerings" has not yet passed. It is possible that these awful rites are necessary to foster that spirit of self-sacrifice which marks the highest reach of humanity, to feed the golden lamp of love, to inculcate the virtue of valor. Perhaps heroes can be forged only with the hammer of Thor. Thus far only blood and tears have produced genius. Wars may be the tidal waves in the mighty social sea that prevent putrefaction.

WANTMORE TRUTH, Washington, Oct. 27.

The Post Impressionist

Your Obedient Servant

HEREWITH is a conclusion as to why the art of letter writing is dead: It's simply because there was once upon a time a flowery day in which men had the ego to put great stock upon what they said. Times have changed, of course, and men now consider themselves more deeply on the basis of what they do.

It's all been thought out, these letters. Now the man who appends the "yours very truly" is no doubt feeling his words quite deeply; and if his rhetoric is considered so lightly it is only a clear sign that his ego is in better balance—which is, by all standards, a more wholesome thing for the world than the arts of syntax.

I shall give you a case in point. Some years ago, a gentleman in Buckingham County, Virginia, searched through an old trunk in an attic for letters which might cast light on the glorious day of his forebears. The appended missive, yellowing and rusty with age, came up from the bottom:

My dear son: Not seeing you at the funeral of Mr. Jeffrey Robertson I inquired and discovered that you were on one of your all too common drunken binges. When you were a child you behaved as a child, but you have sometime ago arrived at the age of a man if not at the estate of a man, therefore, it is no longer becoming in you to besot yourself with whiskey. If you say it is a common offense and that you were overcome in good company I must retort that a man is his own best company and must not seek to hide his offenses behind social barriers.

I am aware that you got quietly tight and took yourself home without offense; yet no gentleman should allow himself to sink into the dull state in inebriation. It does not matter that many men get drunk—they are not gentlemen and not good examples, whatever their standing may be—nor that you behaved quietly after drinking your fill. Restraint is something that belongs peculiarly to the gentleman and the principal evil of drink is the destruction of this quality.

I see nothing for you to do but get married to that person you had in mind. Perhaps her dominant character may serve to give you other things to consider than whiskey. I have not in all my life admired Scottish people, though there may be Scotch blood on my side, of which I am, however, gratefully unaware. But she can do nothing but boss or harass you and you deserve to have both ills visited upon you.

The letter was under date of 1827, the heyday of syntax, when every verb, adjective and infinitive was penned not only for the butcher, the baker or the slave owner who got the note—but for the writer himself. These fancy letter writers, in the main, had little else to do: their homes, quite often, were widely isolated, and there was not always at hand some convenient fellow under obligation to puff up the master's pride.

In their loneliness they simply intoxicated themselves with rhetoric. The writer of the letter in question was a highly intelligent man; he knew the realities, and these realities were precisely the same as those of this day.

He knew that the proper solution of the whole business would be to take the son behind the barn and administer a good swift kick in the pants. But that would only serve the son; the father clearly would be left with no emotional reward. There would be the pride from the persuasive power in his shoe as it connected with the rear of the offender—but a man's powers of violence don't prove him.

And that is definitely what they wanted in that day. So the letter which you at this late date have read was written—and the thought that you might read it undoubtedly inspired the very tone. All the letters of that sort were written to the world. The writers felt the eyes of the world over their shoulders when the writing was being done; they felt the warm and approving breath of the world on the backs of their necks and they arose from the flowing syntax, finally, feeling themselves deeply of the world and contributors to its fulfillment. It helped them no end.

Yes, the father knew that letter was helping nothing but his own literary and spiritual kidney. He knew the son would pay it no heed; and every phrase shows how definitely he wrote the letter to himself. But that was the practice then, because the world wasn't in a hurry, even for improvements. A man could appease himself first and meet the difficulties on some more convenient day. The afternoons were long enough for that.

But the world's grown fast, and so have the letters. It's for the best. Rhetoric wouldn't work now. In our quickened tempo, the father could meet the situation with only this:

See here, why weren't you at that funeral yesterday? I know; you were drunk. How do you expect to get along in this world with a head grogged up with liquor? How do you expect to feed yourself? If you think I'm going to keep on feeding you, you're barking up the wrong tree. And don't marry that girl; she's a worse booze hound than you. One more time and you're out. SCOTT HART.

Fair Enough

Those Home Towners

YES, I KNOW what the Constitution says. But, still and all, they come playing in here in the streets with a cardboard suitcase and a letter of introduction to someone who has preceded them to take advantage of the opportunities, and yet you will find thousands of them who never do come to feel that they belong here.

They don't want to take a stake in the place. Instead they send our good money back home and cling together to keep alive the old traditions and avoid being assimilated. And all the time they are knocking, knocking, knocking and yearning for the day when they have made a pile here so that they can go home again and live like kings in retirement on the cheap rate of exchange.

YOU DO a little nosing around in New York and you will find little groups and State societies—hookers talking about the frost on the pumpkin and singing about the banks of the Wabash, South-easters talking about their old colored mammas and singing about the fields of snowy white, Californians who were starving to death when they left home, yelling "California, here I come!" and even Kansans, by God, giving themselves a build-up about the joys and kind fraternity of life on the steppes.

What I say is, if they loved it so well back where they came from why didn't they stay there? And if they are so fastened to the simple honest life of life back home, well, the trains and buses still keep regular schedules, and if they aren't fast enough there are always the air lines.

BUT CAN YOU picture a hooker going back to the candlelight which gleamed through the sycamores in the song they love to sing and unclutching a swell job in New York at ten times the most he ever made back home? Candlelight! That is a word. Let the power go off for one night in New York on account of some labor trouble, for instance, and give them just a little dose of that candlelight and they will listen to the squawks. Candlelight may be romantic on the banks of the Wabash in the song, but it would be darkness of the Nation's hour of doom in New York.

And clannish! One comes to town, hustles around for a few years, makes a nice little spot for himself, meanwhile sending New York dough home, and pretty soon he has got his nephew or his fraternity brother from old Siwash, or Spaulding, planted in the office while New York boys walk the streets with 0 in their pockets and 0 to do.

THEN THERE comes along his deceased sister's daughter just out of college and he sends her in for a job with another back-homer up the street, and the first thing anybody knows there is a regular hatch of them earning a living in New York—bating New York, constantly knocking New York, wishing New York was like the place they were so eager to get away from and treating the regular New Yorkers like dirt under their feet.

One moves into a neighborhood and—like those little shell gags in the ocean, those who call them, those mollusks or something, they tie together—and pretty soon there is a regular island of them. One throws his business orders to the other and vice versa, and if there comes a little squeeze from one of the natives to obtain some business or a job, why, that only goes to prove what a lousy town New York is and what lousy ethics New York has. And they are appalled by the graft and crime, as though nobody ever used the squeeze or took down any political bug or stuck up a jug back home, in Oklahoma or Ohio, for instance.

YES, I KNOW what the Constitution says, but I say if this town is good enough to make a living in they ought to have to make up their minds whether they are going to be New Yorkers or not, and if not get the hell back where they came from. Or, anyway, quit hollering about how they wish they were back there when everybody knows you couldn't bribe them to give up the soft living and big money they get here.

The only reason they think they want to go back home is that they figure they can get some scrawny little daughter of a poverty-stricken neighbor to do the housework for $2 a week and some college boy in the coolie labor class to wash the windows, mind the furnace and the lawn and drive the car for $5 a week, plus a cot in the woodshed and scraps from the table. But they never go back.

It isn't only the clannishness about jobs and business, it's the resistance to the manners and customs and spirit of New York. They just refuse to get assimilated.

Delano to Head Ward Monument Ceremonies

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and a member of the 1885 Harvard University graduating class, will lead the unveiling ceremonies Thursday of a statue of Maj. Gen. Armand Ward at Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues.

Gen. Ward was the first commander of the American forces in the Revolutionary War and was a graduate of Harvard in 1748. The unveiling will take place at 3 p. m. in the presence of War Secretary Woodring and members of the Harvard Club of Washington.

Too Smart

Among all the causes which have made possible the growth of fascism on all three fronts, possibly the most important is the horse-trading cunningness of the democratic leaders. An extraordinary ability in avoiding issues, in biding time, in taking no statement of the enemy at its face value, because after all behind any blunt declaration there is a conciliatory intention, and the problem is always to wait for the moment when conciliation will be easy.

The cunning, democratic is always provided with abundant first-hand information about what happens in the Fascist camp. He knows that by threatening a march on Rome, Mussolini means that he wishes to enter with two or three of his followers in a conservative government; or that Hitler is so much beset by economic difficulties, by his quarrels with the army, and by his war against the Catholic Church that he has no real urge to swallow Austria. Let the rain fall in Ethiopia and it will wash out all dreams of Italian empire. The democratic interpreters everything that happens with historical perspective: Italy has been engaged in colonial adventure and Spain at regular intervals has a civil war. There is very little that is new in all these recent events. Let the trouble-makers have rope enough, let us not take any uncompromising stand, let us avoid making martyrs of anybody and especially of ourselves.

Such a philosophy is an extraordinary aid to fascism. It diverts attention from its focus, it prevents the concentration of its enemies, it allows its policies to be at the same time blunt and unpredictable. So fascism is unheeded when it announces its theals, and it strikes terror into its enemies' hearts when it attains them. So far both fascisms have constantly enjoyed the advantages of initiative. They have lured their enemies with a mirage of a compromise or of a deal until they were ready to strike their blow.

The Philippines Again

By Vincente Albano Pocias

Special Correspondence of The Post, Manila

THE PHILIPPINE COMMONWEALTH will take the first positive step to reopen the Philippine question before Congress when a mission headed by Vice President Sergio Osmena arrives in Washington in November. It sailed from Manila on October 13. Philippine-American circles will be interested in the mission in connection with the following possibilities:

(1) Will reopening of the Philippine question involve a re-examination of the political terms and date of independence?

(2) Will Congress largely follow the recommendations of the joint preparatory committee on Philippine affairs or will it make a knock-down-and-drag-out affair of it?

(3) Will the Osmena mission repeat itself, that is, return to Manila with a congressional act to be repudiated?

(4) Will Congress act on the Philippines during its coming session?

IT WILL BE REMEMBERED that even as Manuel L. Quezon, now president of the commonwealth, accepted the independence act, he made the reservation that its economic provisions were onerous and would be the subject of future pleas to Congress. Following the inauguration of the commonwealth, President Roosevelt, in accordance with his promise to Quezon, created first an interdepartment committee on the Philippines and later the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs, both bodies being entrusted with the study of Philippine-American economic relations.

There are now in the hands of President Roosevelt and Quezon copies of the latter committee's report whose principal recommendation consists of an endorsement of the present date set for independence, June 4, 1946, and extension of Philippine-American trade preference to 1960. To date, the bulky report has not been published either in Washington or Manila. The reason, it was stated, was that publication would send the potential opponents of the recommendations to a general mobilization aimed at forestalling congressional action.

Thus the strategy adopted by the sponsors of the recommendations is one of surprise. At the psychological moment, President Roosevelt is expected to rush a message to Congress recommending amendments to the Philippine independence law. And before the American sugar, dairy, and other interests have had time to mobilize, Congress may pass the recommended legislation and the Osmena mission may be enabled to go home with the bacon.

BUT THERE are possibilities that the surprise or surprises may come from the other side. The strained relations between President Roosevelt and Senator Charles McNutt of Maryland, chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions, whom the White House tried to purge, may make Congressional action slow if not problematical.

Again, the realistic re-examiners like United States High Commissioner Paul C. McNutt, may seize the reopening of the Philippine question as an opportunity to sabotage political independence. It will be somewhat hard to keep Representatives and Senators, egged on by the right pressure groups, away from the political phase. They could not eat their cake without disturbing the frosting. In fact, many of them would rather lick the frosting and leave the cake alone.

Some observers are bothered by still another possible surprise. "Quezon," they recall, "headed the mission that secured the Hare-Hawes-Cutting law which Quezon hurled back to Congress and which President Roosevelt retrieved with difficulty as the present independence law, better known as the Tydings-McDuffie law. If Osmena should return to Manila with a legislation only approximating the joint preparatory committee's recommendations—and the give-and-take process is going to be inevitable—will Quezon not repudiate Osmena again?"

After all, a new presidential election is due in 1941, and Osmena is mentally slated by the Filipino electorate to succeed Quezon unless Quezon himself succeeds himself. The latter can only occur if the Philippine constitution, which prohibits the president's re-election, is amended; and an amendment would be in order if Quezon should be able to repeat the heroic role he played in connection with the independence law.

AS POSSIBLE as a free-for-all on the Philippine question is a complete avoidance of all references to it during the session. When there was danger of war in Europe, as was the case before the Munich Conference doused the sparks that were to ignite the powder keg, Washington reports stated Congress would be too busy to take up the Philippine problem. But with the new Congressional set-up in which New Dealers have lost their commanding position, and with the Democratic Congress out to legislate the party back to office, the Philippines may never be allowed beyond the waiting room.

Congressional non-action would be a real set-back to the Philippines. As it is, the Commonwealth has already set up a National Economic Council poised to weave plans for economic readjustment on the basis of the new economic terms the Congress is expected to approve along the joint committee's recommendation. The council expects to employ for its purposes the half billion pesos the American Treasury is expected to pay to the Commonwealth in coconut and sugar excise and processing taxes during the next 21 years recommended by the committee, a year of thumb-twiddling by the Filipino economic planners.

To Whom It May Concern: Everyone agrees that the civil service game should be started quickly at the next Congress. The gains made since last June 24 are to be extended. And the point is that Mr. Ramspeck can be expected to carry the bill through the House; but if the Civil Service Committee in the Senate were in late years has lurked Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, keeps its traditional conservatism, more interference can be expected than ball carrying. Add to this the historic slowness of the Senate side. A cheering section might be set up in the Senate Civil Service Committee room the very day they take their seats.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Three Viewpoints

AT THE HERALD TRIBUNE conference on Wednesday night nearly a dozen people spoke on peace, including the President of the United States, a former President, Mr. Hoover, and the British foreign secretary, Lord Halifax.

The British foreign secretary spoke with the reserve that any British statesman must feel in one of the most critical moments of the history of that empire. He defended the averting of war over Czechoslovakia on the ground that Czechoslovakia would have been conquered in any case and would have suffered far worse things had she been fought for. He did not tell us whether Czechoslovakia had been told long ago that her treaty with France was not worth the paper it was written on.

HE DID NOT tell us whether she had been warned long ago that in a showdown Britain would hold back France from intervention. He did not indicate that Czechoslovakia has suffered from as complete a conquest as would have been enforced upon her by a victorious war. He did not defend a peace which offered not the slightest protection for those helpless minorities, now the victims of ruthless persecution, whose fault was to ally themselves with the democratic idea.

He did not, however, call the present state of affairs peace. "No true peace can exist," he said, "until the nations are agreed that law and not force shall rule the world." But he had no suggestion as to how that rule of law can be brought about in the history of it, nor what part the rule of force should or must be checked. He suggested that "nations who share the same ideals should be prepared to think together." It is no longer clear to anybody what ideals or what aims determine the foreign policies of the western democracies.

MR. HOOVER was optimistic. He believed the danger of war in Europe had been materially reduced by the Munich agreement. He was clearly in favor of the country making no commitments to fight in Europe in any struggle between the democracies and the dictatorships. He seemed to have no doubt that the Western Hemisphere would be safe in any event. He believed that the greatest healing force that could come to the world would be the restoration of world trade, and urged the resumption of the world economic conference.

Neither Lord Halifax nor Mr. Hoover indicated that what we are dealing with is not national warfare on the pattern of 1914, but revolution, backed up by the threat of war. Do they see, or do they not choose to see, that what has emerged is a tricorned federation of mobilized fascist states in the center of Europe, in the Far East and in the Mediterranean whose purpose is to make a world federation of fascist states—a purpose that has time and again been avowed openly, especially by Mussolini? And that weapons of war, trade policies designed to develop completely monopolistic areas, and propaganda and espionage on a scale unprecedented in all history? What would Mr. Hoover think if the fascist called itself the communist?

HOW ARE WE to restore world trade and on what basis? By enlisting the fascist states and dividing the world into spheres of influence? By again using American gold to help finance the combine? And with it help finance the world revolution? It will be suggested, but not, I am sure, by Mr. Hoover.

The President's brief speech was realistic and clear. "Peace by fear has no more enduring quality than peace by the sword." There can be no peace if national policy adopts as a deliberate instrument the threat of war. And there can be neither peace nor prosperity in a universal armaments race, and that race can only be discontinued by common consent and agreement.

"YOU CANNOT organize civilization around the core of militarism and expect reason to control human destinies." And the President might have added that unless reason again controls human destinies, liberty and democracy are finished for a long time in this world.

"We in the United States do not seek to impose on any other people either our way of life or our internal form of government. But we are determined to maintain and protect the way of life and to use every endeavor in our power to make the Western Hemisphere may work out its own interrelated salvation in the light of its own interrelated experience."

The President has reaffirmed the Monroe Doctrine in no uncertain terms. He also looks away from Europe and toward the New World. But he does not promise us in this iron age certain peace. He might say with Pericles, happiness is freedom . . . and freedom is courage.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

ADD THINGS that break the monotony of the Government day: The letter received by the Photographic Section of the Air Corps, which delivered an envelope. "If not delivered in five days, please deliver on the sixth." The mislaid was from a child who wanted some airplane pictures.

The efficient Navy yesterday found its Commander-in-Chief a half hour behind schedule at the ceremonies in the Navy Yard. Due at 12:15, the President arrived at 12:45, and thousands of people were in captivity behind the big gates that could not be opened until the President appeared.

CORRIDOR conversation overheard: Some of them are sorry they are not getting the party week—not that there's much chance of it now. They see one terrible handicap in it: If they stay in five days, please deliver on the sixth. The mislaid was from a child who wanted some airplane pictures.

And some of them actually feel such a resentment against the political appointees that they would deprive themselves of such a boon as the five-day week to keep any advantage from the political crowd.

To Whom It May Concern: Everyone agrees that the civil service game should be started quickly at the next Congress. The gains made since last June 24 are to be extended. And the point is that Mr. Ramspeck can be expected to carry the bill through the House; but if the Civil Service Committee in the Senate were in late years has lurked Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, keeps its traditional conservatism, more interference can be expected than ball carrying. Add to this the historic slowness of the Senate side. A cheering section might be set up in the Senate Civil Service Committee room the very day they take their seats.

SOME OF the cheering for civil service will hit town, in an organized way, shortly after Congress opens. The A. F. G. E. yesterday announced that it intends formal observance of the week of January 15, the anniversary of the act being on January 16. Even so early, the federation is launching the celebration plans, including a "giant meeting" for January 16, at which nationally known civil service experts will speak. The A. F. G. E. started—and sustains—the idea of celebrating the birth of the merit idea.

Commissioner of Fisheries Frank T. Bell—whose work is in relation to his hobby—gets a genuine antique calash as first prize for the biggest catch in the malinali (outdoor) tournament in Hawaii last August. He caught, it is alleged, a 135-pound hui (yellow fin tuna). Dr. Elmer Higgins, chief of the Bureau's scientific division, thinks he was pretty tactful in hooking a 132-pound hui, three pounds less than the hui his boss caught.

The calash, if you haven't one in your home, looks like a wooden salad bowl, and has a silver fish embossed on its side. Bell says he will put it with his other trophies in the den of his home in Ephrata, Wash.

NOTES: Leave-takings in the Navy Department next Tuesday include: Eleanor S. Rater, maintenance and operating division; she was born in Maryland and was appointed to the Bureau of Census, 1906, in which the U. S. Navy Department since 1915. Miss Rosa L. Brough, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, was born in Washington, and has been with the Navy Reserve April 10, 1917. She was transferred on August 1, 1919, with civil status, to the Navy Labor Bureau of Supplies and Accounts since 1921. Mrs. Flora C. Eckhardt, born in the District of Columbia, and has been on duty in the Bureau of Construction and repair since October 21, 1918. The A. F. G. E. holds its district meeting tonight in the Hamilton Hotel; the delegates to the A. F. of L. Convention in Houston will report. . . . As a concession to the Halloween crowd, the Treasury Department Recreation Association will furnish half masques to those attending its dance tomorrow night at the Wardman Park.

Hazen Leaves Sickbed to Cut Cake—He's 71

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen got up out of a sickbed last night to cut his birthday cake. Accompanied by Mrs. Hazen and several close friends, the Commissioner celebrated his seventy-first birthday by successfully extinguishing all the candles on the cake. There were only seven candles. Hazen has been ill with a cold for almost a week.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Away From It All

ADMIRAL BYRD wanted to get away from it all—and he did. Little America seemed crowded; like an old-time Westerner, harassed by the sense of neighbors within, he moved away. One hundred and twenty-three miles south of Little America he built his lonely shack, and there he spent four and a half as lonely months as any man ever spent on earth, almost dying in his isolation. Of that experience he told somewhat in "Discovery," published three years ago when the experience was fresh; he tells far more in "Alone" (Putnam, $2.50).

"I really want to go," Admiral Byrd says. For 14 years he had been bustling through expeditions—in 1919, the Navy's transatlantic flight; in 1925, Greenland; in 1926, the North Pole; in 1927, the Atlantic Ocean; 1928-30, the South Pole; 1933, Antarctica again. He alone among men had seen both poles—rather dull spots to look at, he says. He felt aimless, he wanted time off, for books and for music, "more than just privacy, in the geographical sense, I wanted to sink roots into some replenishing philosophy." The reader of this narrative may sense something more than that—a certain tiredness deeper than that produced by gasoline fumes, something close to a welcome to death, linked somehow to the memories of Capt. Scott's unforgettable Antarctic adventure.

THE COOKBOOK along with the alarm clock and a few essential pieces of stovepipe somehow got lost. At first the cook seemed most important of these; the admiral had never progressed beyond camp steak, ham and eggs, when he began his vigil in the 9-by-8-by-13-foot box which was to be his kitchen, bedroom and living room for so many months. Still, most of his food was comfortably canned. Yet, when three weeks after his companions had departed, he found the cookbook, somehow tucked away with navigational gear, he uttered a whoop of joy. The noise coming from his own lips startled him! It dawned upon him that he had not heard a human voice for 20 days. He had not yet learned to talk to himself.

The cookbook, however, was not much help. It told how to make flapjacks, but not how to keep them from sticking to the pan. So, over the radio, he consulted Little America, Little America, after its debonair Oscar, sent off a message to Oscar of Waldorf. Oscar replied, advising buttering the pan, and Little America obeyed the message. But the admiral by that time was fond of his own device; he chiseled his flapjacks free.

The radio worked well enough at first, but the missing links of stovepipe soon made trouble. To replace them, empty gasoline tins had been pounded into shape and worked into the long arm which led across the shack from the little cabin to the stove, serving as sort of overhead radiator. But the links were loose, and when the admiral diagnosed leakage of oil fumes as the cause of his trouble, he was too late to do anything about them.

The fumes clogged in that Antarctic cold and sent the fumes back through any possible crack. "Cold does queer things," the admiral says. At 50 degrees below zero a flashlight died out in your hand. At 55 degrees kerosene will freeze and the flame will dry up on the wick. At 60 degrees rubber will become brittle. And it was often 60 degrees. Novocaine froze and shattered the tubes in his medical kit. Worst of all was the clogging of the fumes. He had blowpipes with which to warm oil lamps, but these he had to use without it. This was my enemy, but I could not live without it.

His companions departed on March 28, leaving him almost exhilarated by solitude. He conscientiously developed habits; even when he was too sick to make diary entries he kept up his meteorological observations. And he kept up his radio schedule with Little America, even after he had fainted from carbon monoxide set free by the generator, when only his unconscious falling to the ground saved him from continued poisoning—the gas remained above his head. But even before July 4, when a lug on the generator shaft drive sheared off, forcing him to resort to the weaker emergency radio set, "Charlie" Murphy, at the receiving end at Little America, had begun to suspect that something was wrong. Byrd was to have remained alone until October, and never would have ordered a rescue expedition even had he known he was dying, but the men at the base took the initiative.

ALMOST 20 weeks Byrd had been alone when the tractor party came chugging southward through the polar night to save him. He hardly remembers his own rescue; he does not tell us how these men patched the leaky fuel-pipes. It was nine weeks more before they even attempted to take their weakened leader back to Little America.

Some aspects of that lonely vigil remain problems which amateur psychologists will debate endlessly. The main outline of the story is here. Copyright, 1938, New York Tribune, Inc.

Unjustified Attack

By Ernest K. Lindley

In Defense Of Gov. Murphy

DOES ANYBODY remember the angry chorus of protests that Hugo L. Black's methods of conducting the Senate lobby investigation evoked from opponents of the New Deal? Mr. Black was a relentless prober. He issued so-called "blatant" subpoenas. He was accused of obtaining improper assistance from the Federal Communications Commission in locating evidence. He had the temerity to bring to light communications between a newspaper publisher and his agents in Washington.

For all this, Mr. Black was charged with violating the American Constitution and the principles of Anglo-Saxon law and with undermining the American system.

IN ASTONISHING number the defenders of the American system who could not stomach Mr. Black's methods have been swallowing without effort, and even with signs of pleasure, the methods of the Dies investigation. It has remained for the President to stamp "Un-American" on the House Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities.

When all the arguments for and against Mr. Black's methods have been sifted, the simple fact remained that he was in quest of tangible evidence. He wanted facts. His interpretation of their significance was not always beyond challenge, but nevertheless he built his case on facts. And he wrung most of those facts from witnesses who truly could be described as hostile.

FERDINAND PECORA'S Wall Street investigation, Senator La Follette's Civil Liberties investigation, indeed, nearly all the important Senate and House investigations have been searches for facts. Most of those facts have been elicited from reluctant witnesses. Mr. Pecora was meticulously correct in his methods. He had no use whatsoever for unsupported opinion. He even eschewed a short-cut which has been used in some other investigations—the use of an accountant to summarize evidence which could be brought out, with greater difficulty, by painstaking questioning of many witnesses.

Senator La Follette's investigation has been a model of thoroughness and fairness. His findings of unpleasant un-American activities have been well buttressed with evidence to be attacked, except in minor detail.

THE DIES COMMITTEE, in the course of its hearings on the subjects, has gathered some material which has the appearance of being factual, and probably is. But so much of it is imbedded in unsupported personal opinion that it cannot be appraised.

To a degree that probably is without precedent in recent Congressional investigations it has served as a mere sounding board for accusations. As the President said of the hearings at which Gov. Murphy was accused of "treasonable activities," the committee "made no effort to get at the truth, either by calling for facts to support mere personal opinion or by allowing facts and personal opinion on the other side." It merely listened to the four men whom the President described as "a disgruntled Republican judge, a discharged Republican city manager and a couple of officious police officers."

WHAT THE PRESIDENT said about the Dies committee is mild compared to the comments which can be heard almost any day in the National Press Club by newspapermen who have been attending the hearings.

Gov. Murphy is not a run-of-the-mine politician. He is an upright, extremely conscientious man of the type of George W. Norris, with an unquestionably sincere devotion to the principles of social justice set forth in the great Papal Encyclical, "On Reconstructing the Social Order." Among the great number of important Democratic officeholders outside Washington he is one of the few who can be classed as both highly intelligent and consistently progressive.

In commenting so eloquently on Gov. Murphy's handling of the sit-down strikes of early 1937, the President acknowledged, by implication, a responsibility. It was the President who prevailed upon Frank Murphy to run for Governor of Michigan in 1936. In his handling of the sit-down strikes, Gov. Murphy kept in the closest touch not only with the Secretary of Labor, but with the President. The three were in agreement that the first objective was to settle the dispute without bloodshed.

GOV. MURPHY not only averted bloodshed but paved the way for the acceptance of genuine collective bargaining in the automobile industry. The sit-down technique has all but disappeared. It will not be revived by responsible union officials because, whether it is legal or illegal, it offends profoundly the neutral public. It never would have cropped up if the automobile manufacturers had seen earlier what most of them seem to recognize now—that collective bargaining has arrived. Selling A Hoosegow

(The famous Tombs Prison in New York is to be sold at auction.—News Item.)

Ladies and gentlemen, this is your chance to get a real bargain in penal institutions. I am about to offer for public sale to the highest bidder the Tombs Prison, famed in song, story and criminal records—rarely a prison like this goes on the market, and collectors will appreciate this unusual opportunity. Let me say that this prison is genuine in every sense, and positively not a reproduction . . .

A letter testifying to its authenticity will be given to the lucky buyer . . .

Now, then, what am I offering for a good hoosegow, one of the best samples of its period? Examine it closely, folks! Step up and see for yourself! It is positively not fake. Always been under one ownership. Collectors will appreciate the advantage of this. Remember, I am selling it without reservation. The buyer gets all the moss, puddles, water plants and insect life connected with it.

I don't know how many of you are waterbug connoisseurs, but those who are will recognize at once some of the largest, choicest and rarest waterbugs in the world today.

What's that? $25,000? Why, that wouldn't buy the waterbug alone! Let me hear some reasonable bidding, please! A very unusual collection of beetles, snails and rats goes with the property. What? $30,000, do I hear? For the kind of rats I am offering here!

Come, come! Isn't there some gentleman here who knows a good hoosegow when he sees it? Why, a building of this type is worth that much money as a keepsake! Isn't there somebody present who once served a term here? Some one who had a father or a mother here? Or maybe a son or daughter? Wouldn't anybody like it for sentimental reasons?

I hear $35,000 from the man in the green suit. Thank you, sir. I can assure you that during its history there have been hundreds of prisoners who would gladly have given that much to own it. Even if they occupied it only a few weeks a year!

10,000 Open Silver Spring Trade Center

19 Stores in Group Market for 50,000 May Buy and Relate

A 15-hour house-warming, attended by a crowd of nearly 10,000, yesterday introduced Montgomery County to its new $500,000 shopping center at Silver Spring.

Nineteen stores, a gas station and movie house, grouped in a single architectural unit at Georgia avenue and the Coleville pike, saw a stream of bargain shoppers throughout the day, while 5,000 persons packed the paved semicircle beyond the plate glass windows for festivities after dark.

Rhythm Tempos Cold
Bundled in topcoats and scarfs, Sidney's Mayflower Hotel Orchestra sent out rhythm to keep all feet beating from jitterbugs to citizens who were just plain cold.

Brooke Jones, formerly with Ziegfeld's Follies, served as master of ceremonies during the drawing of more than 100 prizes donated by various firms in the center. Audrey Seiber, petite stage entertainer, shut her eyes and pulled out the yellow stub which entitled lucky ticket-holders to gifts ranging from permanent waves to radios.

Climax of the program came with announcement of donation of a "live baby," which proved to be a 14-pound piglet.

Walter Johnson, baseball's immortal "Big Train" and now a candidate for county commissioner, assisted with the prize-drawing, after introduction by John as "the finest thing in Montgomery County."

Commissioner Speaks
Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan, Republican candidate for re-election, also appeared on the grandstand to congratulate the promoters on completion of the center and express confidence that the project will be an asset to Silver Spring.

The center, designed to serve a market of 50,000 persons, is considered one of the most carefully planned and completed equipped in the country. Space has been laid out for more than 200 automobiles, while an underpass provides easy passage between two parking areas.

With well-stocked shops, beauty parlor, drug store, restaurant and theater accessible from one parking space, promoters of the enterprise hope to attract numerous customers who will do their shopping and then take their relaxation "in one operation."

The center, owned by a local corporation, was built by the Mohler Construction Co. and designed by John Eberson.

Charlottesville Continues Case For Annexation

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—The City of Charlottesville presented four witnesses today in a hearing of its petition to annex portions of Albemarle County.

Fire Chief Charles H. Page told the three-judge court hearing the annexation plea that the county never had evidenced any desire to provide adequate fire protection for the district adjacent to the city. The county rejected offers of the city to provide fire fighting facilities, he said.

James G. Johnson, superintendent of city schools; Chief of Police Maurice Greaver, and City Manager Seth Burnley also testified.

Variety Spice of Prize Recipes For Apple Dishes in Contest

Many Are Homespun
Others Use Wine
Men Compete, Too

By Alice Clayton
The Post Food Editor

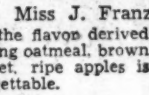

WITH approximately 300 varieties of apples being cultivated in this country, it is no wonder that last week's recipe contest featuring apples should prove popular with local homemakers. Sauces, pies, cakes, fritters, cocktails, rolls, pickles, cobbles, salads and muffins were but a few of the assorted foods entered to glorify the juicy fall apple.

Homemakers didn't stop at a contribution of apple recipes. They specified their choice of trade names and stocks. Nor was sex a barrier to these apple enthusiasts, for one of the most appealing recipes was submitted by Gilbert Harmon, 3224 Wisconsin avenue northwest, who had decided ideas as to how Staymans should be purchased, prepared and eaten.

A few of the more original apple recipes bore such names as Apple Marie, which proved to be a baked fruit decorated with designs made by the lines of a fork being drawn across it. Apple Delight turned out to be a stuff containing nothing but chilled whipped cream, powdered sugar and mashed apples. Apple Crisp, or crunch, was a popular dessert consisting of a pie shell of sliced apples and crumbled butter, sugar, flour and cinnamon. Dimples, filled with fruits, candy, nuts and even rice, were so plentiful that recipe duplications appeared over and over again.

Homespun Recipe

First award of $3 went to Miss Jean Franz, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest. Her apple oatmeal bars don't sound like the height of luxury and neither do the ingredients. That is just why Miss Franz's recipe has been successful this week. Her products are homespun, modest and inexpensive, yet the flavor derived from nutty-tasting oatmeal, brown sugar and sweet, ripe apples is rich and unforgettable.

Miss J. Franz

Apple Oatmeal Bars

Sift 1 cup plain flour or graham flour with 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon soda and 1/4 cup brown sugar; mix with 1 cup cooking oil. Cut in 1/2 cup shortening or butter until crumbly; spread half the mixture in a greased 7 by 11 inch baking dish. Arrange 2 1/2 cups sliced apples over crumb mixture in a buttered baking dish; dot with 2 tablespoons butter and sprinkle 1/2 cup sugar and a little cinnamon or nutmeg over the apples. Cover with remaining crumb mixture. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 40 to 45 minutes. Cut in squares or bars and serve warm with lemon sauce, whipped cream or ice cream, or cold, as a cookie. Chopped butternuts may be sprinkled on top of mixture just before baking if desired.

Country Goodness

Second award of $3 has been won by Mrs. E. S. Warder, Breeze Point, Abel P. O., Md. Baked sausages and apple rolls, such as this weekly food contributor has indulged, even sound like perfect fare for gusty fall meals. Taste the country goodness of sausage patties, tart apples and their dash of nutmeg baked into a crisp pastry dough and you will be won for life to this fragrant-smelling entrée.

Baked Sausage and Apple Rolls

Mix 1 cup scalded milk, 1/4 cup butter, 2 tablespoons dark brown sugar, 1-3 teaspoon salt and cool to lukewarm; add 1 cake yeast, 2 unbleached eggs, and 2 1/2 cups flour. Beat well to form smooth, soft dough and let it rise to twice its bulk. Beat well again and let rise. Form 1 pound sage or celery sausage meat into rolls similar to links and fry half done to extract grease. Pare and core 4 tart apples and slice in eighths. Spread dough in greased pan as thin as possible. Cover center of dough with paper or cloth, leaving a 3-inch border; on this place apple slices partly overlapping and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons sugar and 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg. Remove paper and place sausage in center space and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 30 minutes. Cut into 3-inch squares. Serve hot with a spicy raisin sauce and garnish with grilled pineapple spears.

Appetizer With Difference

Mrs. John D. Swisher, 61 West Washington street, Hagerstown, Md., has succeeded in her ambitions in the culinary field. Her contributions to the food page are so numerous that her desire to be a prize winner has been fulfilled this week. Her suggestion of frying apples with the sweet meatiness of cashew nuts makes her recipe an inviting one as either appetizer or garnish for meats. Vegetarians might favor this dish as the protein filled entrée to a meal.

Mrs. J. Swisher

Fried Apples With Cashew Nuts

Core and peel 4 medium sized apples and cut in crosswise slices 1/4-inch thick, sprinkle with 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, a little cinnamon and juice of 1/2 lemon and dip in fine dry bread crumbs. Fry until tender and brown in hot butter first on one side and then on the other; then transfer to a hot platter. Dust with additional powdered sugar and a dash of cinnamon; sprinkle with 1/2 cup chopped cashew nuts which have been browned in a little butter. Serve with roast chicken, lamb or spiced ham.

Tennessee Twang

Mrs. John C. Parsons, 322 East Montgomery avenue, Rockville, Md., has been awarded a $1 prize for Apple Macaroon. This genial Southerner relates that her "m m m y" back in Tennessee originated the unique cognomen of $50 Macaroon for this fluffy apple pudding.

Mrs. J. Parsons

Apple Macaroon

Peel and slice 5 medium-sized apples, and place in a buttered casserole. Sprinkle 1/2 cup white or brown sugar, a dash of cinnamon and a little flour over them. Cream together 1/2 cup of sugar and 4 tablespoons of butter. Add to this 1 egg well beaten, 1/2 cup lemon juice, a dash of salt and 1/4 cup flour. Beat the entire mixture and pour over the apples. Sprinkle with 1/2 cup thinly sliced pecans or English walnuts and bake 30 to 40 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with lemon sauce or whipped cream, or top with a baked meringue garnished with marshmallow cherries.

Exhilarating Dish

Mrs. Pauline Thornhill, Seat Pleasant, Md., has won a $1 prize for mulled apple fritters. Several

Nuts Used Freely
Dumplings Duplicated
Some Odd Collations

fritter recipes were entered in this contest, but Mrs. Thornhill's introduction of sherry in her fritters proved to have an exhilarating effect upon the contest judges. Her specification also of sour apples marinated in additional wine is one which should appeal to epicureans who care for its suggestiveness only in small doses.

Mulled Apple Fritters

Wash and core 4 medium sized sour apples. Cut in 1/4-inch slices. Marinate for 30 minutes in 1/2 cup sherry. Sift 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and 1/2 cup of powdered sugar. Add 1/3 cup milk or cream, 1 tablespoon melted shortening and 1 well beaten egg. If desired add a few floured raisins, nuts or currants. Dip drained apple slices in the batter and fry in deep fat at 375 F. or when a cube of bread browns in 50 seconds. Fry 3 to 5 minutes or until cooked through and delicately browned, add sprinkle with a cup of powdered sugar. Strained honey mixed with crushed nuts may be passed, with these fritters.

Post Contest This Week Based On Rice Recipes

Rice—one of the most economical and nourishing of foods, will serve as the theme of this week's recipe contest. The selection was made at the request of Mrs. Barbara Lipscomb, 934 New York avenue northwest.

Few grains have as many guises as rice, so if you have a favorite method of preparing a rice pudding, casserole, soup, or muffin, mail your recipe at once to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor.

Any rice dish is eligible. Do you possess a kitchen-tested method of currying wild rice? Or do you adhere to the steamed or baked rice tradition? Perhaps you experimented upon Spanish Rice so often that you have developed just the right amount of spices and seasonings for this appetizing one-dish meal. If so, enter this contest before November 1. Awards include first prize of $3, second of $2 and three additional prizes of $1 each.

Peanuts Lead Field In Popularity

Peanuts, a bean not a nut, lead the field in the taste of the nut consumer. There is a bumper crop this year, September estimates showing a 1,221,000,000 pound total, as compared to 1,291,655,000 pounds last year, a yield well over the ten-year average. Two main types are grown, the small Spanish peanut used for salting and the large Virginia sold in the shell. In making peanut butter the Spanish and Virginia are blended, as the Spanish is oily and the Virginia dry. The runner is another fairly important variety, but used principally in confections.

Consumers Counsel

Advice on Food

HOMEMAKERS' problems, ranging from the cleansing of fresh fruits to service at the table, are discussed in the Consumers' Counsel this week. Hints for caring for pastry dough and for the decoration of cakes, as well as a tart recipe for grape conserve, are also listed. If an overdose of household problems is making a grumpy old lady of you, mail an inquiry to Alice Clayton in care of the Consumers' Counsel. Constructive advice and ideas for The Post food pages also will be given consideration and published whenever possible.

How to Clean Fruit

Mrs. Walter E. Reid, 1621 T street northwest, offers a unique fruit-cleaning idea. She writes: "Is this a new idea? When I prepare any food which is to be eaten with the skin left on, such as tomatoes, apples, plums, etc., I always wash thoroughly in like warm mild, white soda, scrubbing with a small brush in the usual way. Then I rinse in cold water. It is surprising the amount of dirt that can be washed off of fruit which seems clean."

Tea for 40

A recent letter from a well-known hostess, who prefers no mention of her name, asks advice concerning service, table-setting and sandwich-serving. She writes:

"I am giving a tea from 3 to 5 Saturday afternoon. As I am having only 40 guests, the affair will be informal. I plan to serve coffee and punch, no tea. What are your suggestions as to the sandwiches on the dining room table? How many cakes and sandwiches should be on the table? I attend quite a number of teas and the service varies at different homes. I want to be sure of the correct thing to serve without being too formal."

The best plan for a semiformal tea usually consists of two or more sandwiches with contrasting fillings and two or more small cakes, cookies or cup cakes, a candy or fruit confection and nuts. Number and size of plates of these delicacies should be decided with regard to the size of your table and appointments. For the number of guests you mention, two plates of each of the above mentioned foods are sufficient for smaller tables, or four pieces for a large dining room table. It is never good taste to load a table with an overdose of goodies. Beautifully appointed dainties should be well chosen and displayed, and portions should be small out of respect to dinner appetites.

Sandwich Varieties

Here is a tea menu chosen for variety of sandwiches and distinction of appetizing contrasts. Rolled watercress and butter sandwiches. Guava jelly and brown bread sandwiches. Cream cheese and ginger sandwiches. Almond and cucumber sandwiches. Dates meringues.

Tiny buttered toast bars. Sand tarts. Petite fours. Mulled cider punch served hot or cold.

Hot coffee. Punch served hot or cold.

Practical Orange Hint

Mrs. Sara Lee Orange, 2025 I street northwest, always on the alert to create novel ways of lightening kitchen duties, contributes two of her most economical inventions. Here are her cookie budget and temper savers, and a cost-less method of cake decoration.

"To make molded ice box cookies without buying expensive cookie molds: Remove both ends of a small soup can with a can opener which cuts evenly. Grease the insides of the cans before packing in cookie dough. When thoroughly chilled, the firm dough will slide out easily and slice into perfect rounds. This method might be the answer to a cookie makers' dream, for it works every time."

"To decorate a cake attractively without bothering with a frosting: Place a lace paper doily over the top of the cake and spread over it a generous amount of powdered sugar. Press down lightly with a cake server or spatula and gently lift off the doily. This leaves a lovely pattern in snowy white on the brown of your cake."

Preserving never goes out of style. To prove its omnipresence in the kitchen, Mrs. Lulu C.

Madeiros, 3100 Connecticut avenue northwest, has submitted a grape conserve which should prove enticing while grapes are plentiful.

"Now that grapes are in season, I should like to submit a delicious preserve which may be served when an unusual sweet is needed for a meat or fowl menu. This conserve makes a particularly good dessert for children as a luncheon or supper finale."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Annoyed by Husband's Jealousy, Which Includes Even Blood Kin, Wife Asks Cure, If Any

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What on earth can a girl do to cure a jealous husband? I haven't the remotest idea why my husband should be jealous. I certainly have never given him the slightest cause for jealousy. Yet when a cousin of mine lost his mother, my husband was furious because I comforted him. And when his best friend called one evening he accused me of trying to make eyes at him. I don't know what on earth to do. He's so sure he's right. Frankly, if I ever love him less, it won't be due to competition from other men. It will be because I have lost respect for a man who is jealous when he has positively no provocation. DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Whoever would cure jealousy must bring remedial forces to bear upon that sense of fear which underlies the hysterical reaction. The person who is jealous of a loved one is a person who distrusts his own capacity either to win or hold the beloved's full affection. The morbid panic which seizes upon him when he senses the existence of a supposed rival is childish, unreasoning. For the duration of the seizure he is as one in the clutches of a nightmare. And afterward he lives in uneasy memory of it.

A wise wife who truly loved her miserably jealous husband would bring to bear upon his nervous distress the same sympathetic, co-operative, constructive intelligence that a wise mother would display in handling a child who had fallen victim to night terrors, since both belong in the same category of sick emotional symptoms.

The first thing to do, of course, is to treat the symptom with the seriousness it deserves, by inviting the sufferer's full confidence; by patiently, gently and tactfully encouraging him to bring out of the dark recesses of his mind all the hobbings that are tormenting him. The next thing to do is to subject these ugly phantoms to a continuous radiation of seriously sympathetic, loyally loving common sense, which should dissolve them eventually as sunshine dissolves shadow.

To build against relapses (and there are bound to be relapses at first, although they should, if properly treated, begin almost immediately to diminish in frequency and intensity) the sufferer should be given not only assurance but every proof that his fears are imaginary. In the terror-stricken child's case, discussion and explanation undoubtedly would be supplemented in the beginning, with the installation of a constant night light in his bedroom, so that he could see for himself at any and all hours that his surroundings were fixed, friendly and familiar. In the jealous husband's case, he should be and he can be—unless he is an out and out psychopathic case—brought to a conviction that no matter what he thinks or fancies he sees, his wife loves him first, last and best.

But he cannot be brought to such a conviction; the chimera of imminent desertion cannot be exercised, if his undeniable (however unprovoked) distress is made the butt of scornful, angry, indignant, impatient, defiant or contemptuous reactions on his wife's part. Rather, she should bend every effort to reveal herself to him in the light of dependable ministering angel and enduring loyal advocate. There is no place for facetiousness in the early treatment of the frantically jealous person. You might as well try to laugh a child out of fright-fears that have taken deep root.

Your husband's foolish jealousy stems back, no doubt, to some early childhood betrayal of emotional trust. It has to do with some deeply buried memory of feminine defection, real or fancied. He thinks either that no woman is to be trusted, or that he personally hasn't got what it takes to win and hold a woman's heart. It is your responsibility (and I trust you love him enough to make the effort) to prove the error of his supposition on both scores. Show him that you, at least, are the exceptional woman who can be trusted in all ways, and lavish upon him such an abundance of special wife love, praise and attention that his starved ego will blossom like a flower in the summer sun, and he will begin to strut like a peacock rather than eye you with suspicion. Do that, and you may know that you have achieved a work of art, bearing the imprint of genius in the field of human relationships. It has been done, I saw it done, in one instance. M. H.

'Ugly Duckling' Is Changed Into Modern Glamour Girl

Kallie Foutz Made Over by Experts
Health Program Basis of Work
Posture, Hair and Skin Improved

By Ida Jean Kain.

THIS IS a true story that sounds like a fairy tale... the story of an ugly duckling who turned into a glamour girl! Our heroine is Kallie Foutz, of Salt Lake City, and a granddaughter of Brigham Young, who—she said this—went West to change the map while she came East to have her map changed!

You can see how it happened that Kallie Foutz wrote the winning letter in a national contest, sponsored by Mademoiselle Magazine and a New York department store, to find the girl in America most in need of being made over. Besides, she sent along a picture. Every girl and woman is interested in hearing how this transformation was worked, but it is of special interest to the girl who is too thin. The beauty authorities who took Kallie in hand found her considerably underweight. Her figure was lumpy. Her posture was poor. Her hair was lifeless from overbrushing and lack of care. Her skin was bad.

A Health Program
Here had to be a health program, quite as much as a beauty program, and one of the first things done for Kallie was to systemize her entire day, giving proper importance to adequate exercise and rest, a nourishing diet and plenty of sleep. The next thing was for the circulation—a combination of massage and stretching exercises.

The stimulation of the circulation gave her normal appetite and aided in the assimilation of the nourishing foods essential to a weight gain. In the morning she had fruit with cream, eggs and toast, and a glass of milk, one-third cream. In the middle of the morning she took another glass of milk with one-third cream. For luncheon there was always a creamed dish of some kind, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon a malted or chocolate drink. Outdoor exercise in the form of leisurely walks not only aided the assimilation of the extra food, but also enabled her to sleep nine hours every night. In addition, she rested each day at noon and again before dinner. If you are trying to build up your weight and vitality rest is a valuable part of your program.

Our heroine's hair was the particular despair of the beauty experts. It was brushed and brushed, and her scalp was massaged, and given hot oil treatments to bring back the life. In two weeks it looked like a different head of hair.

And four weeks later you would not have recognized Kallie for the same girl who walked into Grand Central Station. Her vitality had improved to such a degree that her walk had a nice spring to it, her posture was naturally erect. She had also learned that good posture is less tiring.

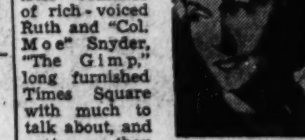

Of course, this transformation has altered her entire outlook on life. She has even changed her name from Kallie to Karol—and I predict that it won't be long before she changes her last name!

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27. BROADWAYS devious denizens still gather in knots, on sunny afternoons, and discuss the unhappy affairs of the day.

ALICE HUGHES.

Mr. Hall, my susceptible mate, always thought Ruth an extraordinarily fascinating girl, and most lovely to look at. He still remembers her vividly as she sang "Ten Cents a Dance," and "Cigarettes, Cigarettes," and "Shine on, Harvest Moon" in the later Ziegfeld operas. He was not alone. Dozens of local lads had violent crushes on the blue-eyed and shapely lark, and they included one of the most widely known and read Broadway chatterboxes. But practically none gave her an offside wink or leer, let alone a friendly pinch. For there was always the strangely ominous figure of "the colonel," who had a reputation for being a very tough and ready citizen. Probably he was. Moreover, he was 15 years of devotion to La Eting, a no ordinary matter of romance. A local doctor friend of his says that "Moe's" adoration of the singer was downright psychopathic, and who can doubt it after the lamentable gunplay in the Coast.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Peculiarities which view our city with alarm as the world capital of sin always fire off their best horror at the town's dime-a-dance halls, each with "50-cent 'em—beautiful hostesses"—and perhaps some of them aren't any better than they should be. But the blue noses forget that they are often the scene of big-time romances, when lonely boys from across the railroad tracks fall in love with pretty blonde dance partners, and marry them. We've just had another such, with the well-to-do young H. Russell Goode wedding last night Ives Adams, a hostess at the Orpheum Dance Palace on Broadway. Moreover, the groom's family welcomed the girl, and all seems serene. And at the famous Roseland hall you might have seen George Raft recently. He paid it a visit for old sake, for once slick Georgie worked there...

Models chase each other in and out of fame and overwork. The current rage among the photos is Helen Bennett, really a local girl, whose blonde hair is fancily curled on top and whose face and figure appear a dozen times in current style magazines. She's also in the musical show, "You Never Know"—which has Lupe Velez and Lib Holman.

Eiffel Tower Hat Will Prevail Says Modiste

Mme. Valentine Here Predicts High Toppers Calls Americans Drab

By Marshall Adams.

FORTIFIED by a mammoth pillow muf of skunk, a skyscraper feathered toque, a French accent and a suave Middle Western manager, Madame Valentine, imaginative Parisian modiste, took a few flyers at American independence against a continental millinery model. According to this fanciful designer who is in Washington for a few days while on a tour of American cities, the American girl is a colorless millinery prospect. However, her fashion future will be bright, she believes, if she absorbs and lives by some of the following of the designer's predictions.

Wears Two-Foot Hats
Eiffel Tower hats are Madame Valentine's leading prediction. These hats she seems to have in-dorsed personally to the exclusion of all other styles. What she personally lacks in height, she has substituted in two-foot tall toques. These soaring toppers have caused near riots in several small towns that the stylist has visited in this country.

"In another year or two the American woman will take to the skyscraper hat which all Paris adores at present," prophesied the modiste. "Women over here wear such appealingly dull hats I don't believe they can hold out much longer against the little toque that sits well forward on the head and then shoots high up into the air. The antique felt which you Americans call a classic-sloof-hat is vanishing forever. In another few years, smaller, more elaborate hats of personal distinction will take their place in your affections."

Office Finer, Decried
Mme. Valentine believes the American girl dresses too much according to the season's dictates rather than to her own type, which, incidentally, few of them understand. The canny French woman, she observes, dresses more unobtrusively for office or supper, girl or woman, in this country whom she describes as looking "as though she were going to a party during working hours and appearing unsophisticated and unindividualistic by night."

Madame Valentine suggests these rules to follow when selecting a new winter bonnet:
If your face is square, choose a wide beret which juts out over the forehead and rides high in the back. Forget about pillboxes and salons.

If your face is round and short, choose a tall fez or shako, not too rounded.
If small featured, choose a turban, usually extreme angles are dangerous.
If your face is long and angular, wear flat, wide brims and always slant angles over the eye.

Shoppers

Shoppers who drive you wild by the immobility of their backs... who mosey along as leisurely as if they lived off of annuities and never had to be anywhere at a certain time... who take their chums along and stroll arm in arm with them through crowded aisles... who don't know right from left and who are stricken with St. Vitus dance when you confront them in your mad rush... who crowd up in the front of elevators when they are going to the eighth floor... who get to the back of elevators and begin shouting "second" as soon as the car gets in motion... who come running to delay elevators going up and then announce that they are going down... who stare at you openly and critically when you are preening your feet before the mirror in the shoes department... who block the front of escalators trying to figure out how to get on... who push past you importantly on moving escalators... who hold their positions at the bargain counter and shut out every view while they are waiting for their change... who assume grande dame airs to obtain attention from clerks... who look at expensive distinctive costume jewelry, order two-thousand dollar chignon hose by the half dozen pairs, try on mink coats and make you wonder where on earth everybody gets the money.

Correct Timing

If only a man when he keeps his Would plan to arrive just five minutes late. Life would be simpler for all the girls Who are always delayed by recalcitrant curls.

If he's writer or artist you may make up your mind He will be at least forty-five minutes behind; While you fume and fuss and wait for his call He will take his sweet time—or not get there at all.

Accountant or bank clerk, he'll be there on the dot, And acutely aware of the fact you are not. You'll pant and you'll puff and try to atone. It would be more relaxing to go it alone.

A salesman with push or a critical worm Is the worst type of all for he thinks you're the firm. He will always arrive fifteen minutes ahead. By the time you get there—well is his face red? Now the man of my dreams would show some sense. Not a word delay me nor make me tense. Come not too late nor too early nor yet on the letter. Just five minutes behind—well ten might be better.

Have you ever stopped to think about the many ways that a small Post Want Ad can help to solve your problems?

Maybe you have a farm that you want to sell. A small ad in The Post's classified section will bring your offer to the attention of prospects who are interested in farms. Maybe you have a house to sell. A Post Want Ad will bring you people who are interested in buying houses. Maybe you're looking for a better position. A small ad in The Post's "Situations" column will reach persons who might be looking for such services as you have to offer.

Post Want Ads command the attention of more than 108,000 families . . . people you could never reach except through Post Want Ads.

Have you any problem? Why not use the far-reaching power of a Post Want Ad?

WASHINGTON'S HOME NEWSPAPER

Some Justices' Wives Drop 'At Home' Custom

Mrs. Hughes Prefers Informality of Quiet Tea Bids to Her Small Gatherings Highly Prized Mrs. Stone Has Resumed Monday Receptions

By Hope Ridings Miller,

The Post Society Editor.

"WHEN THE SUPREME COURT ladies begin to observe their weekly 'at home,' the social season really is under way." This quotation, from a book on Washington written almost 30 years ago, applies almost as well today. For now, as in the past, these functions signal the beginning of a whirl that increases in speed each week right up to the Lenten lull when Capital entertaining goes into low gear once more.

Not all the Supreme Court hostesses will observe "at homes" this season, however. Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes has not received on Monday afternoons the past two winters and does not expect to do so this year. She prefers to give small luncheons and teas when the time is convenient, rather than to be at home at a stated time each week during the season.

For a number of years, Mrs. Louis Brandeis has not received on Mondays. With the Justice she frequently entertains instead at Sunday afternoon teas which are not intended as social functions but serve to bring together congenial groups. Invitations to these informal affairs are widely treasured, and there are any number of Washington residents who would rather have a cup of tea with Justice and Mrs. Brandeis than dine sumptuously in other households.

Whether and when Mrs. Pierce Butler will observe her Monday "at homes" this winter is not yet known. Not long ago, she slipped away to California for a brief visit, is still there, and is not expected to return until some time next month.

MRS. HARLAN FISKE STONE, who entertains frequently in her handsome home on Wyoming avenue, already has launched her Monday receptions for the season and has received twice. Her "at homes," which draw some of Washington's outstanding officials and social notables, are among the most delightful events of their kind in the Capital.

Still out of town is Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who has been lingering on at the farm in Kimberton, Pa., to enjoy the autumn season. She is expected to return next week, and probably will resume her Monday receiving either on November 7 or the following Monday.

Mrs. Hugo Black plans to be "at home" each Monday afternoon during the season, beginning November 7, and on that same day Mrs. Stanley Reed will start her weekly receptions. She and Justice Reed, who make their home at the Mayflower, recently have enlarged their attractive apartment.

SOCIETY GO-ROUND: Dr. and Mrs. John Oliver La Gore and Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan are planning a Christmas Caribbean cruise. Miss Jacqueline Meredith, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Payne Meredith, will leave today for Charlottesville, Va., to attend the first dance of the season at the University of Virginia. She will return Monday.

Miss Eleanor Connolly, who recently returned to Washington after a summer abroad and has been at the Sulgrave Club, has taken a house at 1425 Thirty-third street and will move there next week. Early in the summer she had a series of fascinating experiences when she took the "Odyssey Cruise" from Venice through the Ionian and Aegean islands and back to Venice once more.

Later, she was in Munich during the first period of mobilization and then went to Prague to visit the American Minister and Mrs. Wilbur Carr. From there she went to London, sailing for home the second week in September. She spent some time visiting friends in the Adirondacks before coming on to Washington last week.

Mrs. Baldwin D. Spilman, sr., of Warrenton, Va., will give a luncheon today in honor of Mrs. David Mack Warren, of Baltimore, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. William C. Marshall, of Warrenton. Guests will include Mrs. Chauncey Williams, Mrs. Richard Barret, Mrs. Fred Haerick, Mrs. Douglas Lees, Mrs. George Lawrence and Mrs. Ida Evans.

Invitations Issued

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis have issued invitations for an "at home" on Wednesday, November 2.

They Pull Strings and the Show Goes On

Mrs. Thomas Knowles and Mrs. Andre Cruse will represent the Washington Junior League at the five-day puppetry conference, which will open at Dayton, Ohio, on Monday and is under the sponsorship of the Junior Leagues of America. This is the first national conference of this kind ever held by amateur puppeteers.

Mother Arranges Tea Wednesday For Dr. Hawley

Mrs. Charles Augustus Hawley will entertain at a tea at the Arts Club in honor of her daughter, Dr. Carlotta Hawley, whose marriage to Dr. Harry William Mitten, jr., of Panama, will take place November 11. The nuptials will be solemnized at All Souls Unitarian Church. Mrs. Thomas Cajigas will entertain for the couple at a buffet supper November 6.

Madeira School Tea Saturday

Mrs. Frank Bright, Mrs. Albert Atwood, Mrs. Charles Robb, Mrs. Swager Sherley and Mrs. Avery Connelley, wives of directors of the Madeira School, will assist at the annual tea to be given by the school's alumnae association, Saturday afternoon. The event will take place at the Sulgrave Club, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Hostesses will include Mrs. Horace W. Penlee, Mrs. David Gaillard, Mrs. Christopher Granger and Mrs. Waldron Faulkner. Mrs. David Wing, president of the school, and Mrs. Hugo Huettig, president of the alumnae association, will receive.

Mrs. Woodring To Open Home

Mrs. Harry A. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, will open her home to a meeting at 5 o'clock this afternoon of Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone's educational committee of the Community Chest League. Members who will be present are Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Ernest G. Draper and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

If a movie director were to cast an actor for the role of an average young unknown Government worker of the 1930's in the Capital, he'd probably choose someone like James Stewart. That would be as near as any. Some are more like Gary Cooper, others like Harpo Marx. I mean the 50,000 anonymous male clerks who help your 533 elected officials and their trusted aides to run the Government.

He'd be twice as comfortable as the average American; better paid than a semiskilled laborer, but not as well paid as a good skilled mechanic; maybe $1,500 a year. He'll get more later, but not much; right now he can't quite afford a 2 1/2-room apartment or a 5-room cottage.

He wears hats less, carries umbrellas more than the average American. Often his pants and coats harmonize rather than match, and he's apt to smoke a pipe, off and on. In his wallet is a street car pass. He's a great reader, and has more time for it than most. His hair is longish, and he's exceptionally fond of music; goes to concerts.

Mr. Bureau Type is more an outdoor man than he looks. He plays golf at 15 cents for nine holes or two-bits for 18, or tennis at a dime an hour, on public links and courts. You see him on street cars with his golf bag; sometimes he hires a locker for $2 a month at the public clubhouse, with ten rounds of golf thrown in.

Sometimes he plays tennis or drives golf balls at night under brilliant lights, though he enjoys more daylight outdoors than most, working from 8 to 4:30. Maybe he's scheming for an outdoor motorhome, and likes to go about occasionally. Sometimes he rides a horse at $1 an hour.

Intellectually he is well above the average. By inclination he is philosophical. A good companion, a good conversationalist, he is an amiable but confirmed individualist, even if he is a cog in the greatest of all machines. He is like a younger member of a college faculty.

He's rather bashful with the girls, but not too timid to be caught eventually by a girl who allows for his shyness. He's a better catch than most men of his age, because when he's 42 or 48 and has worked 30 years he can retire on a $1,200 pension; meanwhile he can scarcely lose his job, and for $1.50 a month he can provide for appendicitis or babies.

He comes from about 25,000 different towns, or half the villages in the postal guide. He isn't wildly enthusiastic about his job, but he figures that in the long run, what with lack of worry and beautiful surroundings, he's as well off as a $3,000 man here home. And he's paid vacations are about three times as long as the average American's.

At midmorning or midafternoon he's apt to step down to the refreshment counter in the first-floor corridor for a coke or a candy bar. Sometimes he dines at 5 and takes in an early movie. He's twice as apt to own an automobile as the average American, and he drives it a long time.

He isn't as leftish as he thinks he is; about the same political opinions as a prewar Milwaukee socialist. For self-improvement he's a push-over; if he isn't studying something, he's vaguely planning to. When he steps into a bar for a drink, it's quite a celebration.

He doesn't work nearly so hard as his superior. His job consists mostly of some plain or fancy form of shuffling papers, but in a way that's more indispensable to democracy than are Fourth of July orations. Is he efficient? Is he inefficient? Is he a patriot? Is he a robot? What are his chances of becoming one of the 1,100 government men who get $10,000 or more from a rather tight-fisted boss? Maybe we can go into that later.

Va. Poultrymen Elect Directors

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—The Virginia State Poultry Federation elected directors today at its eleventh annual convention here. Officers will be elected at the annual meeting of the new board. The federation named William R. Shaffer, Maurertown hatcheryman, director for a two-year term, and re-elected the following to two-year terms on the board: H. T. Bowles, Charlottesville breeder; Carter M. Keane, Kilmarnock flock owner; and W. E. Callers, flock owner of Moseley.

Approximately 300 delegates are attending the convention, which opened today for a two-day session.

Nice Blames Legislature For Debt Rise

O'Connor Also 'Hostile' Needed Bills Rejected Hearings Not Given Fiscal Knot Cited

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Md., Oct. 27.—Gov. Harry W. Nice blamed his Democratic opponents and a hostile Legislature tonight for conditions which compelled the State to borrow funds to meet current expenses soon after the Nice administration took office. Completing a campaign tour of Dorchester County, the Republican standard-bearer told a mass meeting here his address was the first of a series of talks on State fiscal affairs comprising a "report of my stewardship."

Starting "at the beginning" with a report on proposed fiscal legislation given him by a special committee, Gov. Nice asserted he had instructed Attorney General Herbert R. O'Connor, now his Democratic opponent, to prepare legislation based on the report.

"I am no dictator," he continued. "It is my function to submit to the Legislature problems, with their possible solution. It is the function of the Legislature to hold open and frank hearings of all the people to determine what is the best interests of the people."

"But what happened to this legislation?" the Democratic legislator asked. "The Democratic Legislature rejected these bills. They rejected them as rapidly as they were introduced there were no public hearings. The Legislature did not try to get the views of the people."

"Nor did the attorney general, who was in effect the head of the Democratic Party, make any effort to induce the Democratic Legislature to give these important bills a public hearing."

"And during this time, the fiscal problems of the State were mounting higher and higher. There was a deficit in State funds which inherited from the previous Administration, and the whole business of our State government was at a standstill."

This situation forced the Administration to use gasoline tax revenues and borrowed funds to meet current expenses, he continued, describing the problem during his administration as one of "reconstruction or rehabilitation."

The Governor said his administration spent or has available $10,000,000 for capital improvements "and today your company has $16,303,129 in the banks. . . . Where other states operating at a loss have increased 30 per cent since 1934, he concluded, Maryland's operating expenses have increased only slightly more than 1 per cent."

La Plata Hospital Board Is Named, Rules Approved

Special Dispatch to The Post.

La Plata, Md., Oct. 27.—A hospital governing committee was appointed and organization rules were approved this afternoon as the Charles County Board of Commissioners met with a representative group of citizens to organize the new Physicians Memorial Hospital here.

Finishing touches are being put on the institution, the first hospital in Charles County. A definite opening date will be set later and it was indicated that dedication would take place early in November.

Bernard Perry, county commissioner, presided at the meeting. H. S. Swann, Faulkner, was named chairman of the hospital committee, and the following members were appointed: P. D. Brown, La Plata; Benjamin Compton, Pisgah; Walter Mills, Doncaster; W. Carlisle, Turner; Pope Creek; William H. Lloyd, Mount Victoria; James C. Mitchell, La Plata; Mrs. Horace Posey, Indian Head; Mrs. Clarence McDonagh, Hughesville; Ernest Meade, Hughesville; J. T. Twidwell, Marbury. The committee members will serve for one year.

State Plants Trout Eggs

Marion, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—For future enjoyment of Virginia trout anglers, a fishery of 1,000,000 trout eggs were "planted" today at the State fish and game commission's hatchery here.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Virginia is serving again as a battle ground—this time in a war against a marching army of beetles instead of men.

Like an army of humans, the Japanese beetles have been steadily pushing toward the front, first sending forward "outposts" and then following up with larger detachments to "take over" new territory.

Against this invasion, Federal and State forces are fighting with patrol stations and poisons. Federal authorities are spending this year in Virginia approximately $40,000 while the State's expenditures will amount to about $12,000, or more than twice the amount spent last year in the fight against the beetle.

G. T. French, State entomologist, said leaders of the campaign hope to "hold back the invasion with a reasonable expenditure of money, attempting in the meanwhile to develop better methods of control and to introduce parasites to prey on the beetle."

Virginia has become the battle front in the fight against the beetle's march into the Deep South. At the present time, the regulated areas in Virginia include the Eastern Shore, a group of six North Virginia counties south of Washington, and areas around Richmond, Norfolk and Roanoke. The Federal authorities are interested in the Virginia campaign not only for control in this State but for prevention of the invasion into other Southern States.

There are 12 patrol stations being operated in Virginia this year and in addition two near the Virginia line in West Virginia. Up to September 30, Mr. French said, the stations took 7,420 adult beetles from loaded trucks and automobiles, collected between 400 and 500 larvae, and turned back 637 vehicles for inspection back of the "front lines."

The Japanese beetle, believed to have reached Virginia in 1934, is one of the most destructive of insect pests. It feeds on a wide variety of farm crops, ornamental shade trees and roses, and while in the larva stage on the roots of lawn grass.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Suez' Is Superlative In Entertainment

Stellar Cast Does Superior Work
'Declaration of Independence' at Earle
News Notes of the Theater

Box office queues, extending from the Palace Theater in both directions on F street yesterday morning, awaited the opening of the theater for first Washington presentations of Twentieth Century-Fox's production of "Suez."

BELL

No doubt those in line anticipated a picture of magnitude and splendor, executed on the grand scale, rich in adventure and romance and reflective of the background of one of the most important achievements in history.

In this they were not disappointed. "Suez" bears eloquent testimony to Producer Darryl Zanuck's having expended the full resources of Movietone City upon one of the most pretentious screen subjects he ever has undertaken. It is a picture of superb beauty, vast variety of content and, at certain periods in its disclosures, of high excitement and thrills. It is enacted, furthermore, by a cast that measures up well to the demands of a narrative that manages to capture more than a little of the political importance and power of its theme.

While the inspiration of Ferdinand de Lesseps to build an inland waterway connecting the Mediterranean and Red seas, and the tremendous difficulties that attended the realization of his dream, constitute the major movement of the film, it is threaded by a double vein of romance that personalizes the epic chronicle of events and lends it added warmth and color. It is in this movement that "Suez" departs most conspicuously—and most agreeably—from the recorded facts of history. A great attachment is contrived between De Lesseps and the Countess Eugenie de Montijo, later the Empress Eugenie, wife of Louis Napoleon, and a secondary love affair is made to enter his life in the boyish person of Toni Pellerin, daughter of a French army sergeant and a sort of modified Cigarette of the desert and the garrisons. Such liberties as have been taken in fashioning the story are rather on the side of its interest and enlivening entertainment than in the nature of any serious impairment of its historical value.

Nor is "Suez" without its moments of "comedy relief." Both Toni and Said Pasha are made the symbols of sharply contrasted comic impulses—the former as a humor-scarum tomboy; the latter as a young Egyptian potentate eager to learn European sports and customs. The friendship between De Lesseps and Mehmet Ali and his son, Said Pasha, later Viceroy of Egypt, is one of the film's genuinely authentic notes.

But the incidents which in all probability will linger in the casual mind after viewing "Suez" are the stupendously realistic scenes of the dynamiting of a mountain by marauding Turkish soldiers, disguised as rebellious Arabs, and the destruction of much of De Lesseps' work by the raging sultan that brings havoc, suffering and death in its wake. It is here that Toni heroically sacrifices her own life in an effort to save the life of the man to whom she is bound by a consuming love.

Tyrone Power, of course, makes De Lesseps a younger man, by some 30 years, than he actually was at that period in his career depicted in the film, but his portrayal of the role still seems to this column by far the best thing he has done for the cameras. The developments of the story compel him to imbue his part with more vigor, more heroism and more vibrance than he ever has betrayed in any earlier picture. He does not age during the action, to be sure, but that is a distinctly minor consideration in view of the other merits he brings to his performance. Loretta Young, as the Empress Eugenie is called upon principally to look ravishingly beautiful in a series of the most picturesque costumes she has ever been called upon to wear and this function she performs literally to the queen's taste. Annabella, cast in the character of Toni, like Mr. Power, does the best work she has revealed to American audiences. She has perfected her English miraculously since her almost incomprehensible baroness in "The Baroness and the Butler."

The many others in the long roster of principals maintain an unusually high standard of individual and collective excellence—particularly J. Edward Bromberg, as Said Pasha; Maurice Moscovitch, his patriarchal father; Henry Stephenson and Nigel Bruce, as the rival French and British ambassadors; Leon Ames, as Louis Napoleon, and George Zucco and Miles Mander, as the English Prime Minister and Benjamin Disraeli, respectively. The lesser characters are portrayed with almost equal skill by Sig Ruman, the Serg. Pellerin; Rafaela Ottiano, Victor Varconi, Frank Reicher, Brandon Hurst, Albert Conti, Georges Renavent, Odette Myrle, and scores more.

Delicately tinted film—not to be confused with natural color photography—adds effectively to the extraordinary beauty of many of the most magnificent scenes.

We repeat that "Suez" is one of the "big ones" of "the motion pictures' greatest year."

Despite its rather more than conventional length, "Suez" is augmented on the new bill at the Palace by two diverting short subjects. Foremost of these is the inimitable Mr. Robert Benchley's inspired bit of nonsense on "How to Watch Football." Any other way would be better. A further comedy note is struck by the pugnacious Popeye in a new cartoon comedy, emphasizing the truism that "Mutiny Ain't Nice." The latest release of the pictured "News of the Day" completes one of the season's bargain programs.

Congratulations yesterday were being showered upon Dan Terrell, of the local Warner Brothers organization, on a particularly happy "world premiere." About yesterday midday, the proudly inflated Mr. Terrell was presented with a handsome 7-pound son by his charming wife, Martha. Both mother and son are flourishing in Garfield Hospital. There were a lot of us Scorpios born on "Navy Day," the most distinguished, of course, being the late Theodore Roosevelt, former President of the United States. It is a deep pleasure to welcome Master Terrell on one of the best birth dates to be found on the calendar. But his dad will try to tell you it was on account of his arrival that the flags were flying yesterday!

Although crowded out of yesterday's last edition, it should be remembered that the engagement of "Grand Illusion," one of the finest anti-war films ever made, will end at the Belasco Theater on Sunday night. This is the subject in which the stellar roles are played by Jean Gabin, Pierre Fresnay, Eric Von Stroheim and Dita Parlo. The termination of its run is necessitated by the earlier booking of the week of grand opera, opening Monday night.

And at the Gayety Theater, next week's attraction will be "Sunny" Lovett and her "Oriental Belles" burlesque company. The star will be supported by Billy "Cheese n' Crackers" Hagen and Billy Field, comedians; Joan Marvis, Lillian Harrison and Tony Romano, at the head of a cast and chorus of 40. So now you know.

And while we are at it, "The Declaration of Independence," Warner Brothers' two-reel Technicolor subject, telling the story of the signing of the famous document, has been added to this week's bill at the Earle as an extra attraction with "Brother Rat" and Herbie Kay's Orchestra and Eleanor Whitney, on the stage. And it is Bing Crosby, et al. in "Sing, You Sinners" that moves into the Columbia today, instead of "King of Alcatraz."

History Repeated In De Mille Choice

Hollywood history repeated itself, in a way, recently.

Cecil B. De Mille, dissatisfied with Wyoming as a place to build the pioneer city of Cheyenne, decided to build it at Iron Springs, Utah. He thought the terrain at the latter spot more interesting as a background for "Union Pacific."

Old-timers recall that when De Mille came out from New York 25 years ago he was dissatisfied with Arizona. He thought it didn't look enough like the Arizona he had envisioned as a background for "The Squaw Man." So he filmed "The Squaw Man" in California, which he called Arizona in the film, and that did much to establish Hollywood as the film capital of the world.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 27.—Well, Warner's did it again in "Angels With Dirty Faces." Gangster pictures aren't new, but the twist in this one is. The picture sets and keeps a fast, consistent pace throughout. Mike Curtiz must have been cracking a long whip, for he gets the best performance those actors have given in a long time, and that's going some. Jimmy Cagney had something to bite into, and Pat O'Brien was excellent in a very difficult role. Ann Sheridan took another step up the ladder. And Mike's handling of the "Dead End" kids was something to marvel at. You just loved Cagney for slapping them down. For that alone I'd let Mike wear my new sables.

HEDDA HOPPER

Was delighted with "Dark Rapture," which shows real life in the Belgian Congo and as handsome a race of black giants as you'll ever behold. Hollywood saw it about a year ago in private houses. It got about that it was a dirty picture, and no producer here would touch it. The New York Universal gang, not knowing as much about movies as we do, grabbed it and now it's cleaning up!

In case our boys would like to know why Toscanini is turning down those movie offers, it's because they're asking him to play Franz Liszt and other composers. They might be able to sign him if they'd permit him to play Toscanini. It's grand to know that the San Francisco Fair will get Toscanini for four concerts. It will set them back $100,000, plus expenses. But he gets that for each broadcast. We get it for nothing each week.

I'm looking forward to Fritz Kreisler's concert on the 29th. I remember once when the current success of that New York season was giving a benefit performance for the blind, Kreisler asked if he might be permitted to take the place of the orchestra, because those musicians weren't allowed to give their services free. For that hour Kreisler made the blind see.

In flying to San Diego I came across an old couple going down there just to see the sunset. Grandma settled into her seat, took out her knitting and went to work. And would poke her husband, who sat in front of her, if he'd occasionally doze off and miss the beauty of the scene. "We haven't many sunsets left," she said. This was the third trip they'd made in a month for that purpose alone.

On landing there I was amused at a mutt dog crossing the main highway with a look of disdain for the cars whizzing by. She shook her head, as much as to say: "What fools, going that fast." She idled and got herself across safely.

I wonder why our neophytes always pick Las Vegas when they want the knot tied. First thing you see, on getting off the plane, is a cactus garden filled with bleached skulls and a floodlight playing on them. Our most recent bridegroom was heard to remark, just before taking the fatal plunge, "Tell me, was that your former husband, or shouldn't I ask?"

When Capt. W. C. Cox came home from Paramout, clutching a new contract in his hand, having just sold his story, "Invasion," to that

Jefferson's Desk Shown
The exhibit of mementoes of Virginia Presidents of the United States, to be held in connection with the tour of historic homes in Alexandria this afternoon and all day tomorrow will be climaxed tomorrow by the showing of a mahogany lap desk on which Thomas Jefferson drafted the Declaration of Independence.

His present owner, Mrs. Franklin Kenworthy, of Exeter, near Purcellville, inherited the desk from her husband, Dr. William Moran Smith, who was a physician for 30 years in Alexandria, where he made his home at 111 North Alfred street, now the residence of the Surgeon General of the United States Navy, Rear Admiral and Mrs. P. S. Rossiter.

Mrs. Kenworthy also will show the presentation letter written and signed by Jefferson in November, 1825, to the recipient of his gift, in which he definitely states that he used the desk to compose the Declaration. Neither desk nor letter has ever before been on exhibit. Normally they are kept heavily insured and closely guarded in a bank vault.

The committee in charge of the President's exhibit includes Mrs. C. E. Cabell, Mrs. Harrison Cruikshank, Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair and Mrs. Henry Wattles.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

DEFEAT: Last night Paramount previewed its newest film, "Men With Wings." As part of the ballyhoo, an Army dinner was held at the Astor, and from the United States Army were borrowed two new, powerful antiaircraft searchlights allegedly strong enough to reach planes flying at 25,000 feet. The Army also promised to furnish 40 planes for the searchlights to reach—outside the Paramount Theater. Because of the haze last night, the planes were recalled. Paramount, therefore, hired an aviator to take his plane up 25,000 feet over Times Square—but the searchlights never found him. The plane was so small the motor couldn't be heard.

TOLERANCE: The State Department recently sent a message to Mussolini requesting consideration for the American non-Aryans now living in Italy. The Fascist government replied that these people will be treated as non-Aryans and not as Italians. The State Department will send another message to Italy, explaining that here in America we make no such distinctions—and requesting that all Americans, no matter of what race or religion, be treated only as Americans.

TURMOIL: Lew Brown, the producer, just announced his return to the field of musical comedy, but hopes to avoid some of the excitement he encountered at his last venture, "Calling All Stars." That show opened in Boston, where Brown invited George Holland, the drama critic who had been barred from that theater, to witness the debut. Holland refused, but finally acceded to Brown's persuasion. When they arrived, two cops barred Holland's entrance—whereupon Lew swung his right and immediately was kayoed by the cops' clubs. "I didn't know they were cops," Brown explained when he was revived. "I saw uniforms—and thought they were doormen."

PLEA: Dorothy Parker met Harry Bridges, the longshoreman leader, in California. "I'm very much interested in your labor work," Dorothy told him. "I will use for slander, alleging that Dix's statements went beyond the limits of customary privilege."

SUIT: George C. Dix, counsel for Johanna Hofmann—one of the defendants in the current Nazi spy trials—here will be a defendant in a suit soon to be brought by a person to whom he referred in his opening address to the jury. The legal papers now are being drawn.

CULTURE: In the night clubs last night word came that the President's newest Executive Order, expected to be announced soon, will affect authors, publishers and book readers throughout the country. The President had been informed that half of America's homes are, on the average, 30 miles away from the nearest library or book store.

The newest Executive Order, therefore, will provide for a reduction in the postage rates on books—which henceforth may be mailed at the same rates as magazines. This was accomplished by the chairman of the P. O. Committee and now a candidate for the Senate—Jim Medd.

CHATTER: The cabaret squad has ordered a purity cleanup in the cafes. Two night clubs have been instructed to eliminate nudity. Paul Muni's play now includes a portrayal of "The Life of Pulitzer." Bruce Barton's opponents are investigating a report that Barton's home is 200 feet outside the district in which he's running. Ronald Colman and Reginald Owen will appear in Selznick's production of "Rebecca."

A "Peace Edition" of John Gunther's "Inside Europe" is being published. Arrangements now are being completed for a radio adaptation of the "Judge Hardy" series.

The auditorium of the Virginia Public Service Co. Building. One hundred and fifty are expected to attend, between 80 and 90 from this city and the remainder from Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William counties.

The school is to continue each Tuesday night until December 13, when it will be recessed until January 10 next.

Montgomery Liberal Voters Form League

Mrs. Clapper President
Coercion Denied
G. O. P. Rally Tonight

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post,
2113 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 4208

Montgomery County Democrats, interested in "perpetuating the liberal policies of the Democratic Party," have organized a Liberal Voters League, with Mrs. Olive Clapper, of Chevy Chase, as president. It was announced yesterday.

The nucleus of the new organization includes Democrats who supported Representative Lewis in his unsuccessful bid for the senatorial nomination.

Mrs. Clapper was co-chairman of the Lewis-for-Senate Club of Montgomery County in the recent primary election in which Senator Tydings was victorious.

Other officers are Eugene Casey, who managed Representative Lewis' campaign in the county, first vice president; Harry Martin, second vice president; T. Ormond Nichols, secretary, and George W. Davis, treasurer.

Members of the board of governors are Mrs. Jane Latimer, Judge Harry Hunt, J. G. Faircloth, B. Storer, J. C. Slagg and Thomas P. Bones.

The organization states as its objectives election of delegates to the 1940 Democratic National Convention who will support the nomination of a liberal candidate for President and also to organize a movement for the nomination of a liberal Democrat for United States Senator from Maryland in 1940 when the term of Senator George L. Radcliffe expires.

Coercion Denied
Miss Ella Umstead, clerk in the Montgomery County accountant's office, denied yesterday that she or any other appointee of the Fusion administration had been "coerced" into contributing to the Democratic campaign chest.

In a letter to Commissioner Paul Coughlan, Republican, who recently accused Democratic Commissioner Clay Plummer of "coercion," Miss Umstead stated:

"I beg to inform you that I, as an employee of the present Fusion administration and a supporter of the United Organization Democrats, feel that you have no doubt been misinformed regarding our contributions. I, personally, have contributed to such a fund through no insistence on the part of Mr. Plummer or any other commissioner or candidate. However, it was entirely voluntary on my part, and I feel sure the same is true of all other workers, or at least those with whom I have talked. Now, since you have undertaken to make it appear that Mr. Plummer is coercing every one of us by threatening our jobs, my contribution, as were all others, was sent direct to our campaign fund treasurer, Mr. J. Donald Clagett, without defilement."

"I have talked to Mr. Plummer practically every day and can truthfully state that he has made no reference whatsoever to any campaign fund, and feel perfectly safe in saying that Mr. Plummer does not know whether I have given or not and furthermore does not care."

Questions Answered
Washington I. Cleveland, chairman of the committee of 50 in Montgomery County, announced yesterday that all candidates for county offices had replied to questionnaires asking whether they agreed with principles set forth in a "Statement of Urgent Civic Needs" prepared last spring by the committee.

Cleveland said the committee would not attempt to recommend candidates on the basis of replies, but that copies would be distributed among residents of the county so they may vote "intelligently" in the November election.

"The publishing of the present resume," Cleveland added, "will complete the work of the committee of 50, except that the committee will preserve in the hands of its chairman the various replies and the pledges made to it for such use as the members of the committee or any bona fide citizens' organization may care to make of them in the future."

Adventist Session Gets Missions Data

Rogers Gives Report
385 Countries Served
100 From Here Attend

Statistical Secretary H. E. Rogers, of Washington, yesterday reported to the fall council of the Seventh-Day Adventists in Battle Creek, Mich., that missionaries now are teaching in 714 languages. The denomination added 65 new languages during the year, he said.

The church now is working in 385 countries and islands through 28,029 evangelistic and institution laborers, he said.

A hundred persons from Washington and Takoma Park, headquarters of the general conference, were present at the meeting which closes today. Delegates also were present from every continent and many islands.

Alertness Urged
A total of $12,613,178.82 was contributed last year to home and foreign mission, Rogers reported. This did not include local church expenses.

Reaffirming old stands against use of liquor, tobacco, theater going and card playing, the council urged high dignitaries of the "faith" to "not only recognize the danger of worldliness creeping into the ranks of the church, but to maintain an alert watchfulness and an aggressive opposition to its encroachments."

The council voted to hold the next general conference in Kansas City in May and June, 1940. Washington was proposed as a meeting place, but lost out because it had no auditorium to accommodate the large gathering.

Branson Gets Post
W. H. Branson, vice president of the General Council here, was appointed president of the China Divisional Conference, to replace Frederick Griggs, who resigned because of his wife's health. Griggs is expected to return to Washington, his former home.

The China division, which was granted $325,407 last year, asked $488,984 for this year due to destruction of missionary property and medical institutions.

Among those from Takoma Park who gave addresses were W. A. Spicer, M. N. Campbell, E. D. Dick, Dr. D. H. Kress, L. H. Christian, W. H. Branson, A. W. Cornack, W. E. Nelson, treasurer of the General Conference; I. H. Evans, M. E. Kern, E. E. Andross, H. A. Morrison, W. H. Teeddale, H. M. Walton, C. J. Weeks, J. A. Stevens, A. W. Peterson and C. L. Bond.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Farkas and Battles

On a Monday morning in Washington in recent weeks the talk has usually been of Andy Farkas. His exploits of the afternoon before in a Redskins uniform have elicited a full battery of superlatives. Folks have cottoned to the little Hungarian who has left an amazing touchdown trail in his first year of professional football.

But the die-hards and the bitter-enders speak of Farkas with reservations. They acknowledge his value to the Redskins and then they praise about a fellow named Cliff Battles, who used to play for the Redskins last year. To them, the folks who speak of Andy Farkas as "another Battles" are rank heretics. They babble of Battles as if he had been a football player apart from the common herd.

A mighty good football player they call Battles. For the latter they reserve some special ranking, a reverential place in football. Players of Battles' ilk are not supposed to happen along every year. The current enthusiasm for Farkas is well-founded, they admit, but he has yet to prove that he is another Battles.

Battles Was a Smoothie

Well, this department doubts that they can be compared... Farkas and Battles. Because they are far apart as football types. Battles was the smoothie, the looper and lightning in human form. Farkas is the pile-driver, fury unloosed and a helter-skelter guy who is best described, perhaps, as touchdown-hungry.

On certain plays Farkas would be as useless as Battles was potent. On the intricate reverses in which Battles' long strides and powerful bursts of speed maneuvered him past the scrimmage line, Farkas would experience trouble. But the same line thrusts that might not Battles nothing would be apt to see Farkas and his leg drive catapult for any number of yards.

In the open field, one could take his choice. It would be Battles' brain and speed vs. Farkas' deceptive twisting and zig-zagging. Farkas, running with his feet wide apart and built for power, would shake off the more tacklers and provide the more spectacular run. But Battles' run would win, perhaps, on sheer beauty of pace and motion. The tactics would be different. Farkas was shaken off by the powerful twisting of the Hungarian lad, would not have been as likely to lay a hand on Battles. Cliff, when seemingly operating at top speed, always showed an added burst.

ANDY FARKAS

Battles Holds Defensive Edge

As individuals, they could hardly be compared. Whatever comparison was insisted upon must be made in point of their respective value to a football team. That would necessitate a difficult choice. It would be hard to give preference to Battles over a back who can do things that Farkas does when the goal line is looming ahead. And it would be equally difficult to kiss off a fellow who would be apt to give you that 80-yard touchdown run as Battles often did.

If Battles showed an extreme edge over Farkas, then it was in the line of defensive ability. As yet nobody has been so bold as to rate Farkas on a par with Battles when the other club has the ball. Particularly on forward pass defense was Battles a potent package for the Redskins, a department of play in which Farkas has yet failed to distinguish himself, although has not been lax.

But Battles, the Professional League as a ball hawk. That is the league's superlative for a player who can knock down or intercept passes. Battles' ability to diagnose plays was conceded by every coach who ever sent a team against the Redskins. His pass interception and his deadly pass-defense otherwise was an everlasting source of comfort to the long line of Redskins coaches.

Safety Men? Tough Choice

As safety men, the play of Farkas and Battles smacks strongly of their offensive tactics. I don't mean their work against passes, but against running plays. Both rate highly, although they brought down their prey by different methods. Between Farkas and Battles as safety men with a ball-carrier headed goalward, it again would be a difficult choice.

Farkas has demonstrated that he is a sure tackler, and Battles always was. But picture a man loose in the open field with only the safety man confronting him. Farkas would nail his man with a tackle that would be positively vicious, but that tackle would be made head-on. Battles would deal differently with the ball-carrier. He would use the power to stop him head on, perhaps. Battles would run the ball-carrier down and overtake him with his natural burst of speed. He would know which enemy he could overtake. He was the safety-first safety man.

There is no attempt here to detract from Farkas' greatness. That can hardly be done in the light of the little Hungarian's performances for the Redskins and in the light of the figures which show him to be the league's leading scorer despite the fact that he has seen action in only five of the Redskins' six games, and played only two minutes in one of them.

Battles' Fight Was Hot

But I have been thinking that Cliff Battles has not been properly appreciated by Redskins fans. Washington did not see Battles during the five years that the Redskins represented Boston. And when they saw him last year at Griffith Stadium they did not see Battles' greatest performances of 1937.

It was paradoxical, but all of Battles' superior tests of last year were accomplished on foreign fields. It was in the Redskins' game at Philadelphia, at Cleveland, at New York and Chicago that Battles put on the shows that stamped him the finest ball carrier in the professional league.

To watch Battles gallop in the snow at Cleveland was an amazing spectacle. To watch him run 72, 78 and 82 yards within 15 minutes against the Giants at the Polo Grounds was a super-thrill. To watch him dig a game out of the fire at Philadelphia by intercepting a forward pass in the last minute of play was downright inspiring.

To see him gallop 55 yards on the ice with a pass from behind the goal line in the championship game against the Bears was a never-to-be-forgotten sight. And above all, to see him gallop for a touchdown against the Bears' Washington, indeed, did not see Battles at his best. No wonder some of the folks who did speak of him with something akin to reverence.

Chief Nadi Wins Greystone Purse At Narragansett

Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 27 (AP)—W. F. Mannagh's Chief Nadi scored a narrow victory today over Mrs. V. Wye's Bachelor Dinner in the featured Greystone Purse at Narragansett Park.

Two lengths back of Bachelor Dinner was Mrs. W. Hodson's Mansco which had half a length on the Lewin Stables' Candor. So close was the finish of this six-furlong test for 3-year-olds and upward that the spectators were kept waiting while the judges examined the picture from the "eye in the sky."

The previous race had resulted in a dead heat between Oklab and Myrna Lee.

Cautivo and Bachelor Dinner were the first to start down the chute with W. G. Wilson's Bit of Sorrow running third. Chief Nadi did not settle down to his usual stolid until late in the race but Jackie Ronny Nash made a bold move.

Bachelor Dinner opened up an early lead. Through the turn Chief Nadi went right through the center of the pack and, straightening out for home, he split between Cautivo and Our Crest and moved into second at the head of the stretch. From there he went right after Bachelor Dinner and just managed to nip him at the wire. The favored Our Crest ran sixth in the field of seven.

The winner was timed in 1:11.4, and paid $11.10, $4.70 and $3.10; Bachelor Dinner $9.70 and $3.30, and Mansco $3.50.

Two 'Ringer' Cases Jolt Local Racing

James A. Accused Gilbert on Hand He Changes Story Owned by Mott

By Walter Haight.

A new "ringer" case and repercussions from an old one served to jolt Maryland racing circles yesterday.

Following a long, secret investigation, the Maryland racing commission, announced that the 5-year-old James A. which raced at Charles Town, Havre de Grace and Delaware Park last spring and summer, is not the horse registered with the jockey club under that name, but is the 4-year-old Paly Pal.

In a Baltimore court yesterday, Jockey Johnny Gilbert testified under oath that he had been ordered by a New York racing official to give a false statement in regard to the horse Uallo, alleged to have been run as a "ringer" for Bye Bye Will at Pimlico last May. Gilbert was called as a witness in the case of Thomas Malone, Philadelphia horse trainer, against the Maryland racing commission, charging that body with barring him without a proper hearing.

In making the official announcement on James A. Jervis, Jr., chairman of the Maryland racing commission, declared that the gelding would be allowed to run at Pimlico only if entered under the name of a Play Pal. It was learned that the commission has no positive proof as to when or where the two horses were switched and that no rulings will be made at present against any person who trained or owned the two horses.

Changes Requested

While sanctioning the racing of Play Pal, the commission announced that acceptance of the entry of the horse was up to the racing associations. In the event that the horse is entered, racing publications will be requested to list this year's races as those of Play Pal.

James A. or Play Pal, is now the property of Tom Mott, sr., of this city, and is stabled at Laurel with the horses trained by Matt Smart. It is not involved in any way except that he purchased the horse two months ago from R. L. (Peg) Hanna, another Washingtonian.

The commission bases its identity of the horse on reports of veterinarians that the horse has the teeth of a 4-year-old and not a 5-year-old, and that photographs of Play Pal winning at Hawthorne and James A. winning at Havre de Grace show the same horse. Both horses are registered as browns with stars on forehead, but the commission contends, the shape of the star on the horse now at Laurel corresponds with that registered for Play Pal. In addition, both horses have leg scars.

Beat Sun Egret

James A. first drew official notice when he won a sprint at Delaware Park last July 7, leaving in his wake Sun Egret, Bull Whip, Conquer, Lady Maryland and others. Hanna was listed as the owner and D. Kearney as trainer. Hanna, at the time that Kearney saddled the horse because Hanna did not have a New York trainer's license, a requirement at Delaware Park. The Washington owner and trainer operated with track detectives and officials who suspected the horse was a "ringer."

James A. was then shipped to the Benning track, where he remained until transferred to Laurel.

According to the records, the horse James A. first raced at Bowie on November 27 and was last in an 11-hour field while he entered to be claimed for $2,000. Roland Herschberger was listed as the owner. After four full races last year, James A., with J. S. Jones listed as owner, ran second, Happy Nymph, beaten a half length at Nympha, while carrying a 3-1 price. Mrs. B. Fleming claimed him out of that race for $1,250 and she started him once at Bowie. He was out of the money and was shipped to Florida. At Tropical Park, in his first start, he was second to District. Mrs. E. B. Gilkey, for whom Hanna trained, claimed him out of this race for $2,500.

Won at The 'Graw

Under Mrs. Gilkey's ownership, the gelding ran second in three races at Havre de Grace. He then turned in the first victory of his career in a maiden race, defeating Company Halt in a drive. James A. was the consensus of the handicappers on this occasion.

Shortly after this race Hanna purchased the gelding and sent him to Charles Town, where he failed to win. Hanna then transferred him to Delaware Park, where he won his second race.

Hanna said that he sold the horse to Mott after his applications for entries in $50,000 worth of fall stakes in Maryland were not allowed. Hanna said he explained the case to Mott before completing the sale.

Play Pal, a son of Torchilla and Mary Gardine, was a busy horse last year. In 36 starts he won four races and on September 15 of last year when he won a six-furlong race at Hawthorne in $3,500 to $2,500 claiming company. His last appearance was at River Downs where he finished fifth in an allowance race.

Hanna says that he was told by the Maryland Commission last summer to race his horse elsewhere. He insists that he claimed James A. as that horse for Mrs. Gilkey. Hanna said he tried to enter a horse recently at Narragansett Park and that officials refused the entry because he "was in wrong in Maryland."

Hanna, who declares he is innocent of any wrong doing and is being deprived of a livelihood, is considering taking the case to the courts.

The Bye Bye will case came before Judge Eugene O'Donne, in Baltimore yesterday. Trainer Malone seeking a writ of certiorari in an effort to reverse the Maryland Racing Commission's ruling. The commission was charged with barring him partly on unworn statements received by telephone. Malone

Central High Is Favored Over Riders

Old Fivally Renewed Game at 3:30 P. M. Players Injured Central Strong

A rivalry as old as the history of inter-high football competition in Washington will be renewed today in Central's concrete bowl when the winless forces of Roosevelt engage Central's title-contending squad at 3:30 o'clock. A record turnout is anticipated for the game.

The Rough Riders of Roosevelt would seem, by the length of the odds against them, to be in for a heavy ride. A poor showing so far this year as well as precedence and numerous injuries have piled on the backs of the Riders to put them on the shortest odds against any team in the series to date.

Roosevelt lost both its previous starts in the schoolboy grid race to Western and Tech. Added to that will be the absence from the lineup today of Eric Moore, the sturdy

Roosevelt Back Out of Contest

The prospects of Roosevelt High's winning today's game with Tech and last night's game with Western and Tech, added to that will be the absence from the lineup today of Eric Moore, the sturdy center whose fine offensive work and backing up of the line on the defense has made him one of Roosevelt's most dependable performers. Moore was removed from the Western game, with separated muscles in his shoulder and will not be back for duty for three weeks or more.

George Zuras, starting his first game as regular fullback, also was removed from the Western game. He suffered a broken nose. If he sees action today it will be for only a short time and with a heavy mask over his face. Johnny Page, regular guard, may be used by Coach Lynn Woodworth if a damaged knee can be taped well enough.

Central, on the contrary, has its full strength for the game. The team has had nothing more serious than scrimmages to occupy its time for ten days, and anxious to move. Western and Anacostia have fallen before the Mount Pleasanters so far and Roosevelt presents no formidable threat.

In game matter of precedence, Roosevelt also is slated to crumble. For more years than Coach Woodworth cares to recall, Central has had its football way with its Thirteenth street neighbor. Last year, when Central had the poorest team in years, the score was a mere 6-0 in Central's favor, but previously Roosevelt won by 35-2, a score he claims might have been close to the count of the year before if he extended the team.

Of particular importance to Central today will be the presence of Shannon Cramer in the lineup. Cramer, tackle and one of the two lettermen Pearce built this year's team around playing his last year of schoolboy ball. He started active competition at the age of 13 in Pearce's first year at Central.

A solitary factor weighs in Roosevelt's favor. It boasts one of the heaviest lines in the series. Center Moore's position will be filled by either Pearlman or Lester Goldberg, the latter a "find" in the Western game.

Probable line-ups:

Temple Is Favored Tonight Over Hoyas; Castiglia Is Out

Owls Rated 4-1 Choice Over D. C. Team Game Will Be Played at Temple U. Georgetown Seniors to Get Call Tonight

Georgetown University's undefeated squad will entrain late this afternoon for Philadelphia and tonight's make-or-break game with the powerful Owls of Temple University, which marks the beginning of football relations between the schools.

Minus Jim Castiglia, their regular fullback, the Hoyas will take the field against the twice-beaten Owls as 4-1 underdogs. Quaker City fans, grown accustomed to watch the Owls battle teams of the caliber of Pittsburgh, Texas Christian, Bucknell and Boston College, are regarding Georgetown with downright contempt.

Indeed, despite the Hoyas' four straight victories, capped with the 14-13 decision over Manhattan, Philadelphiaans are speaking of tonight's game in terms of a top-sided victory for Pop Warner's Owls.

So it is with a great deal of pleasure that Coach Jack Hagerty approaches this game, the first which has not found the Hilltoppers cast in the role of odds-on favorite. With Temple apparently overconfident or simply indifferent to the prospect of defeating Georgetown, the stage is set for a great upset which would propel Georgetown close to the top of Eastern football.

Seniors Get Call

Hagerty, because of the injury which robbed him of Castiglia and also because he wishes to throw as many experienced players as possible against the veteran Owls tonight, will bench four sophomores and send as many seniors to their positions.

Lefty Rioski, center; Jim Hill and Bill Burke, guards, and Tom Robertson, tackle, will occupy the spots usually filled by Jim Reichey, Mark Ostinato, Augie Lio and Earl Fullilove, respectively. And with Myron Darmohry, a junior, scheduled to replace Castiglia, Georgetown's former predominantly sophomore team is no more.

Doubtful of the ability of Georgetown's running game to dent an unusually rugged Temple line, Hagerty has tutored his charges all week in a more open offense; predicated on plenty of passes. Joe Mellendick, great halfback who last Saturday amazed blasé New Yorker writers with his elusive running, is the key man in the new Georgetown attack. The triple-threat junior is a fairly good passer and an excellent receiver.

er and should alternate at throwing and catching.

Most of the heaving will be done by Jules Koshlap. Mellendick's sophomore halfback mate, who completed passes for both of the Hoyas' touchdowns against Manhattan, Bob Kercher, end, who caught the first of Koshlap's productive passes against the Jaspers, probably will be watched closely by the Owls and Francis (Red) Daly, only Washington boy in the line-up, may get his chance to shine.

Virginia Frosh To Race Plebes

Annapolis, Oct. 27 (AP)—University of Virginia frosh barbers will meet the Naval Academy plebes tomorrow in a 3-mile cross-country meet.

The plebe half-and-dale squad includes W. H. Cross, T. Turner, J. W. Booker, J. O. Seman, J. R. J. H. Burt, E. F. Gallagher, W. C. Shreve, R. H. Johnson, J. C. Tripp.

Powell is an outstanding candidate for All-America honors this season, and is rated a top-notch end in department of play. Few players come his way in games because rival quarterbacks have come to respect his defensive ability, and as a pass receiver Powell has few equals. This season he has gained over 200 yards receiving passes, and figures to boost that total to at least 500 before the curtain falls on the campaign.

Powell is one of the few Middles on the squad who never played football before matriculating at the academy. He was spotted by an athletic instructor in gym class, and promptly ordered out for the football team. A lithe, 180-pounder, he began his career as a back in his first year, but was converted into an end by Tom Hamilton, who preceded Lieut. Hardwick as coach.

Todd was admitted to the city hospital with possible fractured ribs. He may be unable to attend tomorrow night's game.

A bus carrying the Erskine players and coach was in collision with an automobile.

None of the players was injured.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

The few cool days have, as yet, had no effect upon the rock schools, for the catches continue to run just about the same. The usual eight or ten, from three to six or seven pounds, are to be had at any point on the bay, regardless of whether it is morning or evening, and only the boats that occasionally hit a school just right while it is on top, that really bring home the bacon.

There are catching them up the Potomac as far as a mile or so from the mouth of the river, and in the Chesapeake, as far up as the Susquehanna, although boats out of Annapolis, Shadyside and Herring Bay are finding their best fishing under the Eastern Shore. North Beach and Plum Point skippers are finding their schools around Shadyside and Diamond Shoals.

It was an angler fishing the latter place on Sunday who took exception to our Tuesday notes, wherein we stated we had no reports of any blues for the past two weeks. He snaked a bluefish, weighing 21 pounds, and because the gulls were so thick they almost blotted out the sun, had the idea there should be more. But, new to the bay country by his own admission, he has yet to learn that stripers are just as plentiful of their food as blues and for that reason, are an equal attraction for the gulls.

Black Fishing Good

And at this time of the year, bluefishing is either good—slashing, ripping 10 and 12 pounds that leave no doubts in your mind about having been fishing—or it is nonexistent. At the present time, we are inclined to the latter, for the Southern hiegra has been under way for several weeks, and with the additional poor season off the Jersey and Maryland coasts as a guide, it is not hard to believe that local anglers will not see the bluefish schools again until late April on the North Carolina coast.

Black bass fishing, in the coves and creeks down the Potomac, is just what it always is at this time—exceptionally good. In the Potomac Bay, Aquia, Gunston Cove, and even in Mattawoman and Piscataway, although from the latter two places we have heard of several bellyaches during the past week.

It is because some anglers expect to take bass like headhairs, that come back from Piscataway with the idea—if there ever was good fishing on this water, it isn't there now.

Yet almost before the receiver is laid down, another report; this time from an angler who reports the ways of the greatest of freshwater gamesters, and you know it is different. From one to at least 15 strikes, got two close to 3 pounds—another, four, all over 2 pounds, while from a third, or rather a couple—10 from 2 1/2 to 4 1/2 pounds. Such excellent fishing, they went back the following day and caught six more that averaged close to 3 pounds.

Another complaint received last week—that Ray Sewell, who rents the boats at Mattawoman, was seeing bass, and for that reason no sportsman should rent his boats. If he was, he was within the Maryland law, to take, and sell within most of the State, all he could catch, even though the same law says the sportsman can take but 20. However, we know Ray does not seine bass, beyond keeping an occasional one or two for his table, but is fishing for carp—often as many as 30,000 pounds of this rough fish during a winter.

Turkey Shoots

Ray also is trying to keep on hand a supply of bull minkons and small "tobacco boxes" so that anglers will not have to throw them down. The bass are striking reasonably good, as are yellow perch, and we have seen several small catches of chain pickerel, that in this water average about 18 inches.

Turkey shoots are getting under way in almost every section of Maryland. Joe Perry, who is on one for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase like Waltons, while the Prince Georges Game and Fish Protective Association will hold theirs on Crain highway, 2 miles north of Central avenue, on November 12. Saturday, November 5, they will hold a target match at T. B.

Last Saturday, Carl Frey, Joseph Steubner, Desmond Walker, Thomas Terry, Matthew Phelps and Joe Gardener took home a fine assortment of birds, including fishing tackle and blankets from their last clay pigeon and still-target shoot.

This organization, member of the Maryland Federation of Outdoor Sports, has gone on record as favoring the proposed fish and game bill that will come before the Maryland Legislature this winter.

Gilbert on Winner Cheered by Fans White Sand Out 7,000 See Sport

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 27.—Having burned up more money this year than a fire in a bank teller's cage, Rex Flag was not a favorite today with the 7,000 turf customers who watched the race of the Tuscaraora, and among those scalped were the backers of A. C. Compton's White Sand and the Fairfield Stable's Lucky Omen.

White Sand and Lucky Omen, the latter the favorite, must have drawn a carload of cash to show, because Rex Flag, despite his class, paid $4 in third position.

Those who booed Jockey Johnny Gilbert yesterday after he lost with Redlin in the feature, had to applaud him today, for he gave Rex Flag a "million-dollar ride" in all that the time-worn turf phrase implies. He kept the big gelding going from start to finish and was kicking and shouting at the end.

First Win in 15 Starts

It was Rex Flag's first victory in 15 starts. This year he won two and lost six. Today he was carrying top weight of 120 pounds and was clocked for the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47.3-5.

Bewitched was first to show in front when Starter Milton let the field go. Rex Flag was close up, however, and Gilbert rode him to the front of the early packer midway of the back stretch. From that point to the wire Lucky Omen made gallant bids to wear him down, but Rex Flag was still in front a length and a half at the end.

Well-played horses won the first and third races, key events to the daily program. Prowl and Skagerrak made gallant bids to annex the third race. Those fans who counted Prowl and Skagerrak collected $100 for the usual $2 investment.

Bill Bennings At The Post

Dear Al:

Jockey Red Pollard, who has been Seabiscuit's rider when the boy has not been on the injured list, is going to see the West Coast star meet War Admiral on Tuesday. Charles S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, has made arrangements to bring Pollard down from a New England hospital where he has been recovering from a broken leg suffered in a spill some time ago.

Pollard will leave the hospital on Saturday, will come to Baltimore for the race and then will be transferred to Howard's California ranch where he will remain until he is ready to ride again. The Shandon Farm has purchased Millmyth, a 2-year-old filly, from the Milldale Stable. Mrs. John Hay Whitney will ship Stepinetch and several mares to California for breeding purposes. Jacala, Idle Miss, Eposia and Great Union have turned in brisk trials for Saturday's $15,000 added Washington Handicap. Jockey Herb Lindberg has arrived here with his bride of two weeks, the former Dorothy Rae, of Toronto. Lindberg will ride out the season in Maryland. Jockey J. Leyland's wife had the "grand" double the other day on an anniversary. Her hubby rode Alter Ego, the winner of the second half. Post time for the first race Tuesday at Pimlico will be 2 o'clock with the starting time 2:15 for the feature. Jockey Norris Royden, of the Racing Form, arrived to stay through the Pimlico meeting. Let us forget the Maryland turf writers are holding their annual frolic at the Lord Baltimore hotel in Baltimore on November 10.

BILL.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

Bob Burns Says—

One reason why Hollywood has made so many mistakes in pictures is because producers figured the public would like whatever they did. Now they're beginnin' to take the advice of the theater managers over the country because they realize managers are the boys that know what the public want.

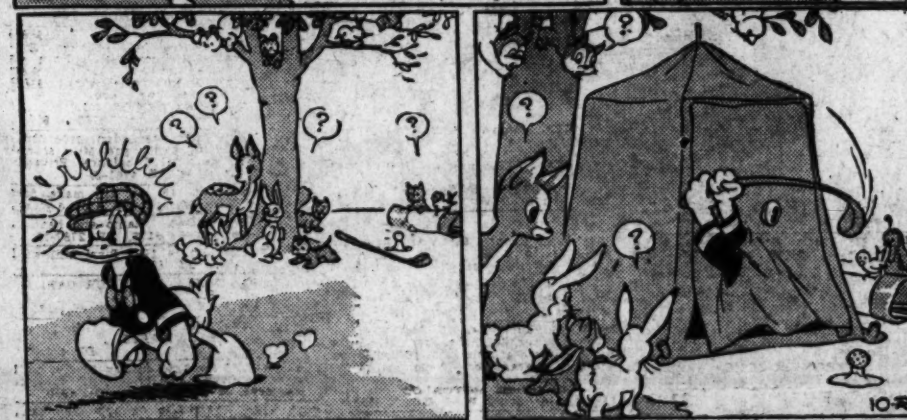

Not long ago a big producer visited a little town where his picture was being shown for the first time. When the audience started to boo and hiss the picture, the producer turned to the little manager and says, "Listen at those people: I declare I don't know what the public wants!" The manager says, "Well, now that ain't so hard to figure. In this case, they want their money back!"

The Washington Civic Theater long since has established itself as a creative acting group capable of coping with the involved demands of long-act plays, requiring minute co-ordination, skillful timing and fluent reading. Their proficiency in interpreting these dramas of unusual, if not unique, design has been demonstrated in "Yellow Jack," "Johnny Johnson," "...one third of a nation..." and numerous others, but perhaps never more vigorously emphasized than in Elmer Rice's three-act drama of "Judgment Day," presented for the first time in Washington in the Rialto Theater last night as the first offering of the Civic's new season.

In "Judgment Day," Mr. Rice, responsible for the direction of the recent "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," at the National, has launched a bitter and destructive attack against the crucifixion of human liberty and justice upon the bloody cross of dictatorship. The scene of the action—it is more a play of dialogue than action, until the last scene of the last act—is the highest court of justice in an imaginary state, under the heel of a tyrant who rules by intimidation and terror.

Trial Constitutes Drama

The case of the National Party against three representatives of the People's Party, accused of treason and attempted murder of the minister president, is being tried. The trial comprises the alpha and the omega of the drama. Through the instrumentality of its testimony, cross-questioning, admissions from the bench and verbal tilts of the opposing counsel, is brought out the full measure of the author's deep contempt for the rape of the world by lawless power.

The developments of the three acts and five scenes are pointed by the unweaving of a shrewd plot on the part of the National Government to safeguard its own continuance in power by means of a trumped up case against its enemies—a case which is hopelessly lost in the final moments of the play by a device which cheapens the whole structure of the drama and makes its chief protagonist of humane and Godly government guilty of an act of violence that refutes his every earlier argument.

While more of a declamatory preaching upon the present social ills of the world than a drama that expresses itself in situation and mobile action, "Judgment Day" still is a play that requires a deal of doing. It penetrates deeply into fundamental emotions and cries out for the robust treatment that will give verisimilitude to scenes of great human anguish, the struggle for life and liberty and the fight, even for the right to live. This the Civic Theater cast gave it last night. The performance was one of remarkable smoothness and genuine power—in so far as it lies within the lines of the play to carry a complete and convincing expression of its author's purpose.

Cast Covered With Glory

Particularly able portrayals were contributed to the continuously expansive ensemble by the five justices of the tribunal—Arthur Isler, Joseph Cochran, Kenneth Banghart, Harry Westcott and Murray Sheehan—Eileen Fowler and Arthur Westover, as the defendants; Marvin Beers, as Conrad Noli, the young American lawyer, returned home to aid in the defense of his sister; Norman Rose, as Prosecutor Anthony; Gloria Brandt, as Sonia Kuman; Joe Bourne, an amusingly bewildered witness; Bess Wilkerson, as Mme. Crevelli, another, and Paul Walker, as the military overlord, Gen. Rakowski. There is neither time nor space to permit a detailed account of the excellence of their work beyond the observation that the play frequently was interrupted by the spontaneous applause they received.

The members of the supporting cast assisted ably in maintaining the high level of excellence established by the principal figures in the clashing forces of opposing philosophies of government—notably Robert Miller, as the chaplain of the plotting Nationalists; Hugh Smythe, as Dr. Parvan, and George Finger, as Dr. Stambulov.

The Civic Theater's new season is off to a distinctly auspicious start.

Malcolm Kerlin, assistant to Secretary of Commerce Roper, yesterday announced a public scientific demonstration by Ernest L. Foss, of General Motors Research Laboratories, at 4:30 p. m. today at the Commerce Auditorium.

Foss will demonstrate wool made from skin milk; glass made from sawdust, and silk of the finest texture which never saw a silkworm.

Kerlin said that "although many of us compliment ourselves on thinking we have reached an outstanding peak in education, our American research laboratories feel we have hardly scratched the surface."

Spiritual Services Will Be Continued

Spiritual services for the members of the Extras Israel Synagogue, led by Dr. Arthur Bogner, were inaugurated last Friday and will be continued indefinitely, it was announced yesterday.

These services will be held each Friday evening at 8 o'clock and the young people of the Northeast community particularly are invited to attend. The synagogue is located at Eighth and I streets northeast.
